TINLEY LEGION POST ORGANIZED; ELECT OFFICERS

Tinley Park has a full fledged American Legion Post now and the town is to be congratulated on the fine spirit of progress and patriotism shown and there is no doubt, but what the new organization will be a big asset to the community one of these days.

On Monday evening, April 29th the Tinley Park Post held their first regular meeting at the Community hall. The following officers were elected: Commander, Frank Hoar; Senior Vice Commander, George Rowden; Junior Vice Commander, Frank Baldwin; Chaplain, Edmund Campbell; Finance Officer, Charles Wallin; Sergeant-at-Arms, Arthur Schoenck; Paul Griswold was appointed Adjutant by the new commander.

The District Commander, assisted by the Commander and Senior Vice Commander of Midlothian Post installed the newly elected officers. Editor Wm. Semmler of the Tinley Park Times was present and was called on for a speech and he greeted the new Post and pointed out the fact that its organization bespoke a progressive spirit in the community.

The Tinley Park Post will give their first dance at the Saenger hall on June first, the proceeds of this dance will go towards the purchase of a stand of colors. With the co-operation of the community, by attending the dance 100 per cent, it will enable the Post to obtain their colors in time for any Fourth of July activities which the community may have in mind.

The Post will meet twice a month. The next meeting of the Post will be May 13th. The new Post has 23 charter members. The charter has been applied for.

Non Collection of Taxes Hits Tinley Village Treasury

The non-collection of taxes in Cook County due to the re-assessment of all real estate in the county, is working a hardship on many small towns and school districts. With no taxes coming in the village of Tinley Park has found itself in strained financial circumstances and the city fathers have been obliged to borrow money to pay for the running expenses of the municipality. It is said no taxes will be available until next December. Taxes will again be collected in the spring so that Cook County will be paying two taxes in a few months, which will be a decided burden on many small property owners.

Tinley Lions To Hold May Party

The Tinley Park Lions are going to roar loud and long Saturday eve, May fourth when they will sponsor their first May Party at the Saenger hall in Tinley Park. This will be a gala affair and everyone is invited to attend and enjoy the fun. Dancing will be the order of the evening. The big feature of the affair will be the giving away of a giant May Basket.

Orland Magistrate Not A Racketeer

Quite a bit of excitement was occasioned by the printing of an article in a Chicago paper last week concerning S. S. Knox, Police Magistrate of Orland Park in which the idea was conveyed that Judge Knox had been arrested as a "racketeer". Now that the hysteria has died down, it is only fair to review the facts in the case. Judge Knox is the State President of the Illinois Justice, Police Magistrate and Constabulary Association, a state wide association organized many years ago for the mutual protection and benefit of its members. This association maintains a state headquarters in Chicago which is open at all times for the benefit of its members. It maintains a legal staff which is available to its members. Advice and assistance are given gratis to its members with the idea in mind of increasing the efficiency of the Justice Court and to enable its members to better discharge the duties of their offices.

For the past 13 years this association has published an annual year book called the Justice Directory and more commonly known as the Justice Blue Book. This book is a compilation of the various statutes, laws and decisions that can properly be applied in a Justice Court and is revised yearly. Other valuable information is included and it is safe to say fully one third of the Justices in the state use this book as their guide in the conduct of their courts. The organization is non-political and non-sectarian and the only income the association has is derived from the advertising matter carried in the book.

In the case in question, a solicitor from the organization had solicited a business man for an advertisement and this man thinking the organization was one which had operated in the state a year ago a confidence game, using the name of a Chicago Judge as bait and promising various sorts of immunity in return for cash consideration, had the solicitor held for questioning. Judge Knox being president of the association along with the other officers were summoned before the States Attorney for questioning and on having the matter explained everyone connected with the case was absolved. There were no arrests made, it simply being a call for questioning and information and the organization has again resumed its operations.

BOY BANDITS CAUGHT AT ORLAND PARK

Last Sunday evening, James J. McNally and his wife locked up their home and went to spend the evening at the home of Mayor Jennings. On their return they were surprised to find that the kitchen window had been pried open, that there was mud and dried grass on the floor and muddy tracks throughout the house. Further investigation showed that the house had been thoroughly ransacked, pictures had been turned, bedding lifted, bureau drawers pulled out, all evidencing that a burglary had been committed.

However a checkup made by the McNallys showed that nothing of value had been taken except two revolvers, a "billy" that had been used by Mr. McNally when he was on the Orland Police Department, a box of cartridges and a fountain pen.

All indications pointed to the fact that the "job" had been done by boys and not very big boys either, as the clearance thru the kitchen window would rule out a man or a large boy. Furthermore, the fact that Mrs. McNally's silver, her fur coat, a valuable radio and many other items of intrinsic value had been disregarded by the burglars in their search, pointed the same way.

A checkup on the activities of several of the Orland boys was quietly conducted and suspicion was narrowed down to a small handful. On Monday Constable Quigley was struck by the peculiar actions of two boys, one a local boy and the other a former Orland boy who was visiting relatives in town. The association of these two boys, their furtive actions and the fact that one of the boys should have been in school that day, excited his suspicions which he communicated to Mr. McNally. That evening, the boys were apprehended and were brot before Police Magistrate Knox for examination. Under questioning the boys readily confessed their guilt and one revolver, the "billy" and part of the cartridges were recovered from the place where the boys had hidden them. The other revolver, the balance of the cartridges and the fountain pen had been taken and secreted in the Chicago home of the other boy and were later recovered.

Inasmuch as these two boys were only children, one aged 12 and the other 13 and that this was their first offense and that the stolen property had been recovered, both Mr. and Mrs. McNally declined to sign a complaint against them and recommended that no criminal action be taken. Magistrate Knox after consultation with Mayor Jennings, Constable Quigley and Mr. McNally, the boys were placed on a year's probation. The Chicago boy was prohibited from visiting or entering the village precinct for one year. The local boy was paroled to Mayor Jennings and under the terms of the parole, it will be necessary for him to report once a week to Mayor Jennings and he is furthermore prohibited from being away from his home after

BUSY TIME FOR ORLAND P. T. A.

A special executive meeting of the Orland Park P. T. A. was held Monday night at the home of the president, Mrs. Adele Cooper and plans for the future activities of the organization were discussed. It was decided to hold a prize masquerade on May 24th and all arrangements were to be left in the hands of a committee to be appointed by the president. The question of appointing a standing committee on supervised play was thoroughly discussed and it was decided to appoint such committee and give the plan a trial.

An order has been placed for 100 chairs to be donated to the school out of the proceeds of the recent play given by the Orland Park P. T. A. It was announced that the Tinley Park P. T. A. would produce their play in the Orland School Auditorium on May 13th and tickets and posters will be out in the next few days.

The next regular meeting of the Association will be held Thursday, May 9th. Through the courtesy of Mrs. Ray Halton we are able to announce that a talk on home planning and interior decorating will be given by Mrs. Henry Bowers of Chicago. Mrs. Bowers is an acknowledged authority on these subjects and an interesting and instructive evening is looked forward to.

Mrs. Harry Melchor will talk on the home flower garden and particularly discuss the subject of the culture of roses, in which line she has achieved some remarkable results.

The girls quartette from the Lemont High School has been secured to furnish the entertainment. Everyone is urged to attend this meeting.

It is hoped by this action that useful citizens can be made of these boys who are really too young to be actual criminals of their own volition and that by proper restriction and regulation of their conduct, a repetition of their act would be impossible. Out of courtesy to the parents and relatives of these boys, their names are not being published.

MOKENA WINS TWO IN A ROW

Friday afternoon, April 26 the Mokena School Base-ball team again "strutted its stuff", this time over the strong Monee High School team to the tune of 5 to 0. Things started off with a bang. Holl, Monee lead off man, struck out, Plagge walked and Tritt slapped a fast one to short. But alas for Monee. Incidentally, here's some good advice to opponents of the Mokena team. "Don't knock grounders to Hern, Mokena short stop". Hern scooped it up and with a quick underhand toss, gave it to McGovney at second who shot it to Walsh at first for as sweet a double play as you ever see in the big leagues in the Mokena half of the first Marti fanned, Muff grounded to Plagge, and Warning popped out to Holl. Score 0 to 0.

Monee's half of the second was sad. Rehberg grounded to McGovney, while Schweisow and Brockmiller took the one, two, three, and Paddy had registered three strikeouts in two innings. In the Mokena half of the second, Homerding grounded out to Brockmiller and Hern produced the first hit of the game, a single between first and second. Walsh then walked and Brown followed with a single over short. With the bases full and one down, Plagge struck out McGovney, and Monee stock rose at least twenty points, but only for the moment. Plagge got wild and issued free passes to both Cappel and Marti, forcing Hern and Walsh across the plate for two runs. Muff then popped to Rehberg at second, who dropped the ball allowing Brown to score. Warning then grounded to Plagge who shut off Marti at the plate, for the third out. Score, Mokena 3, Monee 0.

In the third Buck went by the one, two, three route, Peters popped out to Homerding, Smit walked, and Holl again fanned, making five strikeouts for Paddy. Paddy led off in Mokena's half of the third with a single over short, Hern sacrificed, and Walsh fanned. Brown then walked and Homerding scored from second on McGovney's single to right field. Cappel then grounded out to Brockmiller, retiring the side Score, Mokena 4, Monee 0.

From the fourth on to the end of the game, it was mostly Paddy. Plagge fanned, Tritt walked, and Rehberg fanned. During this time, however, Tritt stole second and advanced to third on a passed ball at home. That was as close as Monee came to scoring. Schweisow, the next man up, also fanned, allowing Tritt to die at third. Mokena chalked up her last run in the 4th. After Marti had grounded to Schweisow, Muff singled over short and advanced to second on Warning's sacrifice. Homerding again singled and Muff scored from second. Hern then grounded to Brockmiller, Score, Mokena 5, Monee 0.

In the fifth Brockmiller grounded to McGovney, Buck walked, and Peter's fanned. Paddy issued another free pass to Smit, but to make up for it, fanned Holl for the third time, adding two more of "those things" to his strike out record in this inning. Mokena's half of the fifth was not so good. Walsh fanned, Brown grounded to Schweisow, and McGovney fanned.

Paddy again did it in the sixth by striking out Plagge and Tritt. Rehberg, however, fooled him by getting Monee's first last and only hit of the game, a beautiful single a foot within the third base line. This didn't bother Paddy though, for he came right back and struck out Schweisow for the third out. Mokena didn't do much in this inning either. Cappel fanned, Marti walked, Muff fanned and Warning grounded out to Plagge.

Just to make it a day, Paddy decided to make the seventh and last unanimous. Brockmiller, Buck and Peters each took three healthy swings and retired with that sad shaking of the head, which to a baseball player means "I don't know why I didn't knock it out of the lot". Final score, Mokena 5, Monee 0.

BOND ISSUE DEAL SETTLED

The Will County bond issue sale is now a matter of local history. Last week the county board approved the new deal with the Chicago bonding house.

The county saves approximately $34,000 in interest from December 31 to July 1 and then receives 4 1/2 per cent on the unpaid balances remaining from time to time instead of 2 per cent. In addition to that, the county begins getting its money August 1929 at the rate of $100,000; September, another $100,000; and on October first another $100,000. The payments in 1930 are to be at the rate of $100,000 a month starting April and continuing until October, representing $700,000 and in 1931 at the rate of $100,000 a month starting April and continuing until September, representing $600,000. The balance of $150,000 is to be paid October 1931.

To Start Survey on Frankfort Road

The past week Fred A. Francis, chairman of the Will County Bond Issue Committee and other members of the committee were in Frankfort conferring with Supervisor Wm. Kampe regarding the mile of paving Frankfort is to receive under the bond issue. This highway is to run south from the Lincoln highway from the four corners thru Frankfort and then connect with Route 51 southwest of the village. There are two routes for this highway, one being to go by the Bauch garage and then to turn in the rear of the Zechlin residence and go west by the Frankfort state bank; the other is to go by the Bauman corner and then down the street by the Frankfort State bank. It is understood that both routes will be surveyed next week. The Thompson-Powers Co., is now engaged in grading the roadbed for route 51 from the four corners southwest to the Michigan Central and from there south to the E. J. & E. railroad. The matter of building subways under both railroads is still undecided.

The matter of surveying Wolf Road from the Will and Cook line thru Mokena to the Lincoln highway may be started within the next few weeks according to the latest reports.

Southwest Survey Comm. to Meet

A meeting is to be held on next Tuesday evening at the Orland Park High school to take up the program calling for a survey of the southwest suburban territory as outlined last week.

MAY POSTPONE MOKENA HEARING

The public hearing on the Mokena sewer project which has been set for Wednesday evening, May 10th may have to be postponed. Mayor Marti said that certain matters have arisen which may cause the hearing to be postponed, but that the property owners directly interested in the matter will be given ample notice in time for the hearing.

Under the law the property owners must be given a written notice ten days before the day of the hearing which would mean that if the property owners on front street and Wolf road do not receive their written notices by Monday or Tuesday of next week, then no hearing can be held May 10th. Only the property owners on front street and Wolf road will receive written notices it is understood, altho all the rest of the property owners on the back streets are to be assessed for the proposed improvement.

According to County Supt. of Highways, Will H. Smith, the village of Mokena would first have to secure a permit from the state board of health to empty the sewer drainage into the Marti creek. They would also have to have a permit from the county authorities to dig a trench and lay sewer tile along the Wolf Road as this is a state aid highway. The consent of Mrs. Marti would also have to be secured permitting the drainage to run thru her farm land.

Much opposition to the proposed improvement is developing in the northeast and northwest sides of the village and plenty of objections will be heard whenever the public hearing is held.

The balmy spring days were almost turned to winter Wednesday and Thursday when the cold north east wind brought cold rains and even snow flurries Thursday noon.

Mothers of Men Who Won a Wilderness

THE OKLAHOMA PIONEER WOMAN,
BY BRYANT BAKER.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

She came to rock the cradle of a new empire. Adventure calls to men, but duty summons women. And so, when the time was ripe to breed new stars for the flag, she set forth from Maine and Ohio and Killarney's loveliness and her Swedish village and her fjord home to mother the wilderness.

Only God and she knows the fullness of her giving to the young Northwest.

She lived in sod houses and hay-roofed huts, with the newest neighbor often a day's trudge away.

She had no deceptions. She did not even know the luxury of floor or fireplace. Her meal was ground in a hand mill and her baking range was a make-shift oven in the yard.

She helped in the fields—at the plowing and the sowing, and she helped to scythe the crop and bind the sheaves.

She watered stock and spun and knitted and tailored. She made a garden and preserved the winter food, milked her cows and nursed her children. The sleepy-eyed sun found her already at her tasks, and the midnight heard her croon the baby to rest.

Her "beauty sleep" began at ten and ended at four. Year in and year out she never had an orange, a box of sweets or a gift of remembrance.

She fought drought and dearth and savages and loneliness, her "Sunday bests" were calico and linsey woolsey. She grew old at the rate of twenty-four months a year at the grubbing hoe and the washtub and the churn.

She bore her bairns alone and buried them on the frozen prairies.

But she asked no pity for her broken arches, her aching back, her poor, gnarled hands. Or for the wistful memories of a fairer youth in sweeter lands.

She gave America the great Northwest, and was too proud to quibble at the cost of the stalwart sons to whom she willed it.

She mothered MEN!

UCH was the tribute which a noted writer, Herbert Kaufman, once paid to "the Prairie Mother," the women pioneers of that great region comprising Minnesota and the Dakotas, the empire known as the new Northwest. But what he said of the prairie mother was true of all pioneer women who were mothers of the frontiersmen who won a wilderness, whether that wilderness was the wooded lands east of the Mississippi or the great plains and mountains of the trans-Mississippi west. For the pioneer mother of America was one of the most heroic types of motherhood the world has ever known and as Mother's Day approaches this year it is interesting to note that America in recent years has shown its appreciation of that fact and has been busy in many places perpetuating her memory.

One of the leaders in this movement have been the Daughters of the American Revolution who began some two years ago to mark the National Old Trails route from the Atlantic to the Pacific with heroic statues of the women who followed that trail across the country. The design of a St. Louis sculptor, A. Leimbach, known as the "Madonna of the Trail," was accepted and twelve of these statues, each eighteen feet tall, are today standing along the trail in the states of Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and California. In nearly every case these statues were unveiled on Mother's day and special interest was attached to the ceremonies in California because one of the women who participated in them was Mrs. Caroline Cook (who is shown in the picture above), an eighty-three-year-old pioneer mother who crossed the plains in a covered wagon.

Two years ago an Oklahoma oil millionaire, E. W. Marland, announced his intention of honoring the pioneer women who settled on the famous Cherokee strip, the last American frontier, by erecting a monument to them. He asked the leading American sculptors to submit models for such a monument and twelve of them responded. The design submitted by Bryant Baker was chosen and it is from this model (shown above) that the statue more than forty feet in height, will be cast and stand on a knoll near Ponca City, Okla. It will be one of the most colossal that has been made in recent years and will be second only to the statue of Liberty in New York harbor in size and majesty.

The state of Kansas is also planning to honor its pioneer woman and has accepted another design by the same sculptor for that purpose. In January of this year one of the features of the celebration of the sixty-eighth birthday of Kansas was the dedication of the site on the state house grounds in Topeka where this statue is to stand. The Pioneer Women's Memorial Association of Kansas, which is sponsoring the movement, is raising a fund of $25,000 for this memorial. In both the Kansas and Oklahoma pioneer mother statues, the sculptor has emphasized the qualities of teacher and worker as well as mother in the women who first came to those states and helped make them the abode of civilization.

When the town of Elmwood, Ill., commissioned its most famous son, Lorado Taft, to model a statue which would typify the pioneer spirit, the sculptor did portray that idea with the figure of a pioneer man. Today the statue which stands in the park square of Elmwood and which was unveiled last year shows a stalwart frontiersman standing, gun in hand, defiantly braving the dangers of the wilderness.

A Woman Homesteader

I walked with quick steps up the coulee trail;
I had to hurry lest the creeping dark
Would catch me and my nervous hands would fail
To find the wire gate that closed the park
Against stray cattle. Here my cabin stood,
In a small wilderness of quaking asp;
Here I "homesteaded." No one thought I could
Two years ago, but now I calmly pass
A bristling porcupine, a rattlesnake,
The watching eyes of some wild, hidden thing—
A coyote sneaking near the dried-up lake,
A row of stunted pines where finches sing,
The mule-eared deer that often come to sup,
And nuzzle one another at my spring
(Which, after cleaning, is but just a cup),
And yet, tonight, how glad I was to bring
My hands in contact with the wire light.
That held my gate. I thought, "Real homesteading!"
I hate the dark; I only love the light!
Quickly I shut the door and slid the draw
Across the iron latch, and dropped the clamp,
Firmly in place, but not before I saw
Near Tiger Butte the glimmer of a lamp.
I stood a moment puzzled by the light—
Startled, perhaps, and curious as a deer
That lifts its head to catch the rushing flight
Of a young grouse. And then my silly fear
Vanished like mountain mist. My lamp! A match!
To cheer that other soul I knew had come
To plough and fence; to have a garden patch;
To live with God as I and build a home.

gers which beset a wilderness breaker. Close beside him stands a woman, a typical pioneer mother shielding in her strong young arms, her baby, and facing with her husband the dangers of the new land.

How worthy the pioneer mother is of having her memory perpetuated in enduring stone or bronze is forcibly impressed upon anyone who reads the history of the American frontier. Volumes could be written about the pioneer woman alone who she did her share in making a home for her mate, how when it was necessary she could handle the rifle and the ax to defend that home, how she braved all the terrors of flooded rivers, prairie fires, snow-filled mountains, hunger, thirst and sickness as she marched by his side in carrying the star of empire westward. One instance of the westward faring pioneer is typical. It is the story of the settling of Nashville, Tenn., of which a re-

THE PIONEER SPIRIT,
BY LORADO TAFT

cent writer has said. "It is an Odyssey without parallel in the annals of Tennessee, if indeed it can be matched anywhere. 'Here is that story as Emerson Hough tells it in his book 'The Way to the West':"

"In 1773, one James Robertson of the Watauga settlements of North Carolina, a steadfast man, heard certain voices that called him to the West. James Robertson, the steadfast, forming his company for this uncertain, perilous enterprise, said: 'We are the advance guard of a civilization, and our way is across the continent.' Simple words—yet that was in 1773!"

Now, for the building of this one town, the town that is now the city of Nashville, and the capital of Tennessee, this leader had gathered three hundred and eighty persons, men, women, and children. All the women and children, one hundred and thirty in number, in charge of a few men, went by boat, scow, pirogue, and canoe, in the winter time, down the bold waters of the Holston and Tennessee rivers. The rest traveled as best they might over the five hundred miles of "trace" across Kentucky. Of this whole party two hundred and twenty-six got through alive.

The boat party had many hundreds of miles of unknown and dangerous waters to travel, and the journey took them three months, a time longer than it now requires to travel around the world. They ran thirty miles of rapids on the shoals of the Tennessee, pursued and fired upon by Cherokee. Of this division of the party only ninety-seven got through alive, and nine of these were wounded. One was drowned, one died of natural causes and was buried, and the rest were killed by the Indians. Their voyage was indeed "without a parallel in modern history." Among those who survived the hardships of the journey was Rachel Donelson, later the wife of Andrew Jackson.

The path of empire in America, the path of corn and venison, was a highway that never ran backward. These men would never leave this country now that they had taken it. But what a tax was this that the barbaric land demanded of them! In November of 1780, less than a year after the party was first organized, there were only one hundred and thirty-four persons left alive out of the original three hundred and eighty, but in the settlement itself there had not been a natural death. The Indians killed these settlers, and the settlers killed the Indians. Death and wounds meant nothing to the adults. The very infants learned a stoic hardihood.

The spring of 1781 found only seventy persons left alive. But when the vote was cast whether to stay or return, not one man voted to give up the fight. In that West corn was worth one hundred and sixty-five dollars a bushel, and in its raising the rifle was as essential as the plow. Powder and lead were priceless. Man and woman together, fearless, changeless, they held the land, giving back not one inch of the west-bound distance they had gained!

In 1781 there were only fifteen persons left alive out of the three hundred and eighty that made this American migration. There had been only one natural death among them. In such a settlement there was no such thing as a hero, because all were heroes. Each man was a master of weapons and incapable of fear. No fiction ever painted a hero like to any one of these. One man, after having been shot and stabbed many times, was scalped alive, and festered about it. A little girl was scalped alive, and lived to forget it. An army of Indians assaulted the settlement, and fifteen men and thirty women beat them off. Mrs. Sally Buchanan, a forgotten heroine, molded bullets all one night during an Indian attack, and on the next morning gave birth to a son.

This was the ancestral fiber of the West. What time had folk like these for powder puff or ruffe, for fan or jeweled snuff box? Their garb was made from the skin of the deer, the fox, the wolf. Their shoes were of hide, the beds were made of the robes of the bear and buffalo. They laid the land under tribute. Yet, so far from mere savagery was the spirit that animated these men that in ten years after they had first cut away the forest they were founding a college and establishing a court of law. Read this forgotten history, one chapter, and a little one, in the history of the West and then turn, if you like, to the chapters of fiction in an older world. You have your choice of lace or elkskin.

HOW TO LIVE LONGER

By JOHN CLARENCE FUNK

DEADLY ROMANCE

ONE afternoon recently a man drove his family into the country. It was a beautiful day, spring was at its best, and the trip was a joyful success. Around noontime the picnic lunch was spread near an old stone walled spring. Here on the back road the romance of days gone by when father had been a boy on the farm, returned to life. And the water so sparkling, and so clear!

Now for the other side of the picture. Two weeks later the parents and the two children became sick. Three weeks later all of them had gone through serious illness, the youngest child unsuccessfully. The romance had been attractive but the unseen typhoid germs had got in their work. Things at the spring had not been what they seemed to be.

City dwellers take pure, clear and safe water as a matter of course. Aren't they paying taxes and water bills for just that thing? Very well, and very logical. But many urbanites forget that at the city line the filtration plant and its intelligent overseers cease to function. It therefore does not pay to become too enthusiastic over the old oaken bucket, the spring by the wayside and the antique pump.

Quite true, some states, but by no means all of them, annually check up on the highway water supplies on the main traveled roads for the protection of the motoring public. They even placard as "Safe" or "Unsafe" every individual source of supply that is likely to serve the passing automobilist. But even in these careful jurisdictions the by-roads in all probability will be missed. Better go thirsty, therefore, if the romantic water supplies cannot present clear proof of their safety.

In this connection, a word to country dwellers. Have your individual supply checked annually by a recognized laboratory. A small money outlay will be necessary but it's nothing compared to doctor bills or funeral expenses. In addition, obtain and study the literature published by your state department of health on this most important subject. Don't take any chances on your water supply no matter how good it looks or tastes. Acting upon this advice may save illness and even death.

QUACK, QUACK

THE barefaced assumption of scientific superiority displayed by quacks should be enough to settle anyone. Add to this the studio portraits of the wizards themselves, and the last vestige of appeal should be gone. But, somehow, the thing works just the other way.

The ability to toot their own horns is their only merit. Having failed in the ethical practice of their professions—medical or dental, if, indeed, they possess even these qualifications—these egotistical gentry purchase space in newspapers (when they can) and in this manner brazenly admit to the world that they have beaten it, including all the scientists and leaders of their chosen calling. Thus they are able to effect marvelous and hitherto unknown cures for as low as a dollar down! Which, it must be confessed, is low indeed.

And so it comes to pass that hundreds of thousands of dollars annually are expended by people who still believe in fairy stories. If this was all there was to it, possibly no objection would be made. If a fellow wants to throw his money away, that's his business. But when it comes to throwing health away, then the matter assumes public importance and a warning is quite justifiable.

In all fairness, quacks sometimes cure people. But their main interest usually is in the money they can extract—not in the amount of health they can bestow. As a matter of fact, many instances are on record where a physical condition has been aggravated for the sole purpose of prolonging the cure.

Indeed, sometimes the outlook as stated by this particular brand of medico has been so unpleasantly (and untruthfully) tragic that the patient upon hearing the verdict has straightway left the office and committed suicide!

The legitimate medical profession, on the other hand, is the foundation of the nation's health. Each community has its share of honest, well-informed and experienced practitioners. What more do you need? Can you afford less?

If you are looking, therefore, for "value received" and health, don't make friends with the quacks.

Following Stars

Wise men are always doing what the Magi in the Gospel story did. They are always following stars. . . . It is this following of starlike ideals, ideals of truth, ideals of honor, ideals of duty, which invests our common life with dignity and meaning.

Poor Mother

"The street car service is rotten. Always overcrowded."

"Yes, but father, you got a seat, didn't you?"

"Yes, but your poor mother had to stand all the way."

NEVER wait to see if a headache will "wear off." Why suffer when there's Bayer Aspirin? The millions of men and women who use it in increasing quantities every year prove that it does relieve such pain. The medical profession pronounces it without effect on the heart, so use it as often as it can spare you any pain. Every druggist always has genuine Bayer Aspirin for the prompt relief of a headache, colds, neuralgia, lumbago, etc. Familiarize yourself with the proven directions in every package.

Makes Life Sweeter

Children's stomachs sour, and need an anti-acid. Keep their systems sweet with Phillips Milk of Magnesia!

When tongue or breath tells of acid condition—correct it with a spoonful of Phillips. Most men and women have been comforted by this universal sweetener—more mothers should invoke its aid for their children. It is a pleasant thing to take, yet neutralizes more acid than the harsher things too often employed for the purpose. No household should be without it.

Phillips is the genuine, prescription product physicians endorse for general use; the name is important. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. registered trade mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

Before and After Childbirth

"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my first baby was born and I am taking it now for my weakened condition after the birth of my second boy. Although I never have put on any flesh I am feeling good now and the Vegetable Compound has helped me in every way. It is surely a wonderful medicine and I will be glad to answer letters for I recommend it highly."—Mrs. Fred W. Davey, Madison, Kansas.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson, Secretary of the Illinois Press Association.

In the March 20 issue of State Capitol News all credit was given the two United States senators from Illinois, Hon. Charles S. Deneen and Hon. Oris F. Glenn, for the retention of Rantoul and Scott fields. The splendid and active influence of the Illinois Congressional delegation, in co-operation with the two senators, defeated the eastern attempt to take these two aviation schools away from Illinois. Among the congressmen who were most active and influential in this were: Dr. Ed. M. Irwin of the Belleville-East St. Louis district; John T. Buckbee, Twelfth district, Rockford; William E. Hull, Sixteenth district, Peoria; Richard Yates, congressman-at-large, Springfield; Elliot W. Sprout and Carl R. Chindholm, Chicago; Frank R. Reid, Eleventh district, Aurora; William R. Johnson, Thirteenth district, Freeport; John C. Allen, Fourteenth district, Monmouth; Homer W. Hall, Seventeenth district, Bloomington; Charles Adkins, Nineteenth district, Decatur; Thomas S. Williams, Twenty-fourth district, Harrisburg; E. E. Denison, Twenty-fifth district, Marion and William B. Holaday, Eighteenth district, Georgetown. Other congressmen may have been active in this matter.

The house committee on municipalities and Chicago traction is now considering the Chicago traction bills and the final vote will be taken soon.

Illinois road building activities for 1929 are getting under way rapidly. The weekly construction report issued by Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer, shows that 0.66 of a mile of paving was completed during a recent week as compared to 0.25 of a mile the week before. As the weeks go on and the various gangs of road builders get started, these weekly figures will mount rapidly. Two hundred and fifty men and 20 teams were employed up to April 11.

Representative W. B. Phillips, 69, serving his sixth term in the Illinois house of representatives, died suddenly at his home in Mr. Vernon April 19. The decedent is the fourth member of the present session to be claimed by death. The others were Representatives Thomas Curran, Chicago; Emmet P. Wilson, Rockford, and Mrs. Flora Cheney, Chicago.

Governor Emmerson has signed House Bill No. 1, introduced by Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg, Chicago, which gives the board of assessors authority to pay the salaries of experts engaged in the reassessment of property in Cook county.

Through strict economy in the operation of the state institutions, Gov. Louis L. Emmerson hopes to be able to provide relief from the present overcrowding without resorting to a bond issue or any material increase in the appropriations for the state institutions.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson was presented with a diamond jewel emblem of active membership in the supreme council of the thirty-third degree of the Masonic order recently.

The senate has passed the bill introduced by Senator George M. Reynolds, Utica, appropriating $15,000 for a culvert under the Illinois and Michigan canal in LaSalle county and another appropriating $49,500 for a hard road to the west entrance to Starved Rock. They now go to the house.

"Sick" corn now has a line of patent medicines all its own and the fortunate thing about it for the farmers is that these medicines actually have produced net returns at the rate of 1,000 per cent on the investment, according to Dr. Benjamin Koehler, crop pathologist at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. The treatments have checked the profit-destroying seed-borne disease of the corn crop.

Senator Lowell B. Mason, Oak Park, has introduced a bill which provides for the inspection, regulation of shipment, possession, sale and use of kerosene, gasoline and naphtha by the state department of finance.

The committee on roads and highway transportation reported to the senate a bill which gives the department of public works and buildings power to enlarge the present highway patrol.

The bill introduced by Representative T. J. Sullivan, Springfield, extending the terms of supreme court commissioners until 1931, has passed the senate.

Without opposition the senate has passed the bill introduced by Senator A. S. Cuthbertson, Bunker Hill, appropriating $750,000 for the construction of a bridge across the Illinois river at Hardin. The bill now goes to the house for action.

Senator James J. Barbour, Chicago, has introduced a substitute for the bill defeated recently, which gives the state supreme court the right to prescribe rules of practice and procedure. The bill limits the rules which the supreme branch may prescribe.

Expansion of vocational agricultural courses in Illinois high schools is likely to be curbed by lack of funds, J. E. Hill, director of vocational agriculture, stated recently in pointing out that but twelve or thirteen of the seventeen interested schools will be able to establish the classes.

Governor Emmerson has signed the bill introduced by Senator A. S. Cuthbertson, Bunker Hill, providing for compulsory school attendance of children.

The house committee on appropriations has reported out for passage the bill introduced by Representative Homer J. Tice, Greenview, appropriating $4,709,097 to the state department of agriculture for the coming two years. The measure contains $716,420 for the state fair division.

The bill advocating the repeal of the Illinois search and seizure and prohibition acts, introduced by Representative Charles H. Weber, Chicago, and Representative Thomas J. O'Grady, Chicago, has been passed by the house. The question of whether or not the acts should be repealed may be submitted to a vote of the people in 1930. This bill now goes to the senate.

Plans for conducting a school of public health instruction at the state fair next August have been announced by Dr. Andy Hall, state health director. Local health officers, including county supervisors who constitute boards of health for rural territory, public health nurses and individuals particularly interested in health work will be invited to attend.

The state division of foods and dairies recently destroyed 252,000 cold storage eggs which were found unfit for human consumption.

The biennial appropriation to the state department of public works and buildings, which has been reported out of the house committee on appropriations, contains a total of $13,580 for Lincoln tomb, and $8,200 for the care and maintenance of the Lincoln home-stead.

Starting late in July the county fair season in Illinois will get under way, coming to a climax the week before and the week following Labor day. Sixty-eight out of 79 county fairs eligible to participate in legislative appropriations have announced the dates for their expositions. The Illinois State fair will be held August 17 to 24.

The bill introduced by Representative Homer J. Tice, Greenview, providing for compulsory bovine tuberculosis testing of all breeding and dairy cattle in Illinois at state expense has been reported out favorably by the house agricultural committee.

Governor Emmerson has signed the emergency bill introduced by Representative Frank A. McCarthy, Elgin, appropriating $13,104.97 for payment of expenses in connection with the inauguration of state officers last January.

Unable to act in his official capacity, the chairman of the board of supervisors, who also is ex-officio chairman of the board of review, should resign so that a successor can be named, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has ruled.

With thirteen hens making perfect scores and other feathered competitors averaging well above normal, yields of winners in the Illinois poultry experimental stations during March were the highest in history. The figures cover reports from the three stations at Quincy, Kankakee and Murphysboro, all of which are operated under the supervision of the poultry husbandry division of the state department of agriculture.

It is the belief of Rodney H. Brandon, director of the state department of public welfare, that his department should play an important part in the program of reforestation of the state. Mr. Brandon believes that the department, from its penal institutions and state hospitals, should deliver to the state of Illinois millions of young trees each year, to be used in reforestation.

Senator Martin B. Bailey, Danville, has introduced a bill which requires telegraph companies to forfeit $25 a day to the sender for delay in paying wired money orders.

Senator Richard J. Barr, Joliet, has introduced a bill amending the state reformatory for women act to change the eligibility age from eighteen to sixteen years.

Three bills designed to prevent floods on the Illinois river and make it an artery of commerce from Chicago to the Gulf of Mexico, have been introduced in the United States house of representatives by Representative Henry T. Ratney of Illinois.

Representative Scholes, Peoria, former speaker of the house, who has been ill for some time, returned to Springfield a few days ago to receive congratulations of oldtime associates and officials. Mr. Scholes appeared before the house committee on roads.

Fruit growers of Illinois report practically no damage to the peach and strawberry crops during the recent period of unsettled weather. The fruit outlook for the year is exceptionally favorable.

SMALL CAKES

Everybody likes a filled cookie and the following is one you will make again and again:

Filled Pineapple Cookies.—Beat two eggs, add one-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of shortening, two tablespoonfuls of milk, three cupfuls of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of lemon extract. Mix as usual, roll out with any fancy cutter. Place the filling on one and cover with another. Then sprinkle cinnamon and sugar well mixed, over each before putting into the oven.

Filling.—Take one tablespoonful of flour, one egg, one-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of grated pineapple and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Cook until well blended and the starch well cooked; add one tablespoonful of butter and cool before using.

Surprise Cakes.—Take one-half cupful of shortening, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, three beaten eggs, two and one-half cupfuls of pastry flour, two and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of lemon or vanilla flavoring, mix as usual and bake in muffin tins. When cool remove the top, scoop out the center and fill with a cooked, cooled cream, whipped cream or a combination of fruit and cream. Ice with frosting, or chocolate and decorate with chopped nuts.

Frosted Caramel Squares.—Cream one-half cupful of butter, add one cupful of sugar, two well beaten eggs, one-half teaspoonful of vanilla, one and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted with one-half teaspoonful of salt and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat the white of one egg and fold in one cupful of light brown sugar, flavor with one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Spread the first mixture on a baking sheet, sprinkle with finely chopped walnuts. Spread the second mixture over the nuts. Bake for twenty minutes in a slow oven. Cut into squares when cool.

Baked Spiced Pudding.—Mix two cupfuls of flour with three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful each of cloves and nutmeg, one-eighth teaspoonful of salt, two-thirds of a cupful of sugar, one egg well beaten, one teaspoonful of vanilla, two-thirds of a cupful of raisins. Pour into a shallow baking dish well greased and bake in a moderate oven. Serve cut into squares with any desired sauce.

Salads and Sandwiches. When fresh pineapples are the most plentiful in the market, is the time to use them more freely.

Pineapple Salad.—Wash a medium sized pineapple and cut it into half, lengthwise, except the leaves—keep them intact. Scoop out the pulp and cut it into cubes. Cut up one grapefruit, two apples, a stalk of celery, add the pineapple cubes and one tablespoonful of chopped pimento; mix with one cupful of mayonnaise and two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Fill the pineapple shell and serve on a bed of lettuce.

Cucumber Salad.—Wash three cucumbers and cut into halves lengthwise. Carefully remove the inside of the cucumber and cut into slices. Take one cupful of chopped tuna fish, a grating of onion, season with a bit of french dressing and refill the cucumber boats. Garnish with tender celery stalks for flag pole and sails. Serve with mayonnaise.

Tomato and Shrimp Salad.—Wash and score even sized tomatoes into six petals to form a flower. Chill and fill the center with shrimps mixed with celery and a well seasoned dressing. Serve on water cress.

Vegetable Sandwiches.—Scrape six new carrots, add one medium sized unpeeled cucumber, four stalks of celery, one seeded green pepper and one-fourth of a small cabbage. Put all through the meat grinder, add enough salad dressing to moisten and use on buttered white bread for sandwiches. A bit of onion improves the flavor. Splendid for a sandwich that must be made a few hours before eating. Keep cold.

Combination Sandwich.—Grind equal quantities of dates, almonds and American cheese. Add enough lemon juice to make of the right consistency to spread. Use as filling or as topping for open sandwiches. If the sandwiches are served open, garnish with a piped border of cheese and whipped cream.

Sweetbread Salad.—Parboil in slightly acidulated water a pair of sweetbreads, drain and dip into ice water to chill. Remove all the membrane and pipes and cut into small pieces; add an equal quantity of celery cut into dice and serve with a rich highly seasoned mayonnaise dressing.

Four Claim Possession of Pen Lincoln Used

The recent sale at auction of a pen purporting to be the implement used by President Lincoln when he signed the emancipation proclamation has brought to light three other pens for which the same honor is claimed. One is owned by Mrs. Stuart Pritchard of Battle Creek, Mich. Another was sold in Philadelphia a few years ago. The third one, recently offered for sale, is backed by the affidavit of Louis Bergdorf, who was a White House messenger at the time, and he says he held the precious document while the President signed it, and a week later he was given the pen and the table upon which the signing was done by the President. The fourth pen exists somewhere in the western part of this country. The Philadelphia pen referred to above is said to have been given by Charles A. Sumner of Lincoln's cabinet to James Wormley, a negro who owned and operated the Wormley hotel in Washington years ago. The history of the Pritchard pen seems to be just as authentic as the others, but Mr. Lincoln could not have made use of more than one pen, and which is the right one is an open question.

"Pan" in His Stomach

Not Culinary Utensil

They had a real laugh at the receiving hospital the other day. A man had been brought in who apparently was more frightened than hurt. He kept crying over and over again that he had swallowed a pan. At first the attendants thought he had been drinking or was out of his head but as neither was the case they began to question him.

"You say you swallowed a pan? What kind of a pan?"

"A pan. Yust a pan Ay bane swallow, py yimminy!"

"But what kind of a pan? You mean a frying pan?"

"No. You bane make fun off me. Ay swallow a fountain pan w'en Ay bane busy t'inkin'."—Los Angeles Times.

Millions in Teeth
Teeth to the value of $6,494,032 were produced in the dental laboratories of this country during 1927, figures obtained by the Department of Commerce indicate. This was an increase of nearly 10 per cent over the previous census of 1925. Dental gold increased 16.6 per cent in the same period, reaching a total of $13,515,408, while the grand total of output for all dental goods, was $42,695,252.

MOKENA

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Wachter were pleasantly surprised by a host of friends and relatives Saturday night in honor of their thirtieth wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Wachter had been invited to go to a show at Joliet and were waiting for their daughter, Mrs. Albert Hentsch of Joliet, to come for them when suddenly about ten automobiles drove up to their home and the surprise party was sprung. The guests brought all the eats and an orchestra. Dancing and music and singing held sway until the early hours of Sunday morning.

As a memento of the occasion, the honored couple were presented with a beautiful pearl handle carving set. Their many friends wish them many more years of happiness.

The used car sale held here by the Buick Motor Co., of Joliet last week resulted in the sale of 3 cars.

While going home from school on Monday afternoon, Rosella McPheerson was bitten by a dog, but the injury was not serious.

Harold Cappel has recovered from his recent operation and has resumed his studies at the local school.

Lot owners in the St. John Cemetery have been notified by the Cemetery Association that all graves and lots must be cleaned and beautified by May 21st so the cemetery will be in a neat condition by Memorial Day. Those wishing to have the work and care taking done can do so by paying the Association for doing the work.

A bunco and card party was held at the school house Thursday night for the benefit of the new school.

The local high school graduating class is rehearsing a play "Deacon Dubbs" which they will present in the near future.

Mrs. Florence Hamilton and children of Joliet visited at the Don C. Hall home Saturday.

John Cappel and John Mattes are the care takers of the St. John Cemetery this summer.

Charles Voight and family of Joliet were entertained at the Don C. Hall home Sunday.

John Liess who has been ill is improving.

Mrs. John Semmler who has been in poor health for a long time, is worse of late.

Mr. Goetz who purchased the old Erwin McGovney place sometime ago, is having the same remodeled and painted.

Funeral services were held last week for Arthur Watson, at Charles City, Iowa. He was the brother-in-law of Mrs. Nicholas Laufer.

Evelyn Barnes is playing the special worship service Sunday.

Sunday is the first Lord's day of the month and the regular offering will be taken for Missions. In view of this fact Helen Cappel is relating an incident of human interest dealing with our neighbors in China. It is hoped that this will add toward a helpful understanding of the work the church is doing all around the world.

The Ladies Aid will meet on Thursday, May ninth at the church.

The Ladies Aid are helping to sponsor work in the Good Will Industries of Chicago. This is a most helpful enterprise by which many needy people are given a chance to be self supporting. They will be willing to tell you more about it. Within the next two weeks they are receiving all sorts of clothing, and materials which might be worked over or repaired. If you have any of such please leave them at Cooper and Hostert's Garage. They will be sent where they will do someone some good, while other wise they just accumulate in your store-rooms.

Saturday afternoon Miss Smith's and Clyde Knudson's classes are meeting to do a little work on the church lawn. After which they will play an indoor baseball game and finish up with a picnic lunch. They will gather at the church about two o'clock.

390 Grade Crossings Are Eliminated

Three hundred and ninety rail and road grade crossings were eliminated from the federal aid highway system thruout the United States in 1928.

This number is only a fraction of the total number of such crossings removed from all roads in the nation. There are no statistics available to show how many crossings were abolished on state, county and municipal thoroughfares. Of the 390 crossings referred to, 107 were eliminated through grade separations, while 283 were excluded thru relocation of the highways. Between 1917 and 1928 inclusive, a total of 4,291 grade crossings have been removed from federal aid highways. Grade separations were employed on 947, while the remaining 3,344 potential death traps were abolished thru the relocation of highways.

For the year 1928, Wisconsin heads the list of eliminations, with a total of 35. Alabama is second with 31; Michigan, third with 26; Texas, fourth with 25; Indiana, fifth with 24; Kansas, sixth with 23; and Montana, seventh with 22. Georgia and Illinois each are credited with 21, and Mississippi with 17.

For the period from 1917 thru 1928, Texas heads the list with a total of 440 eliminations. Minnesota is second with 321; Iowa, third with 212; Wisconsin, fourth with 204; North Dakota, fifth with 193; Georgia, sixth with 182; Oklahoma, seventh with 162; Illinois, eighth with 161; Kansas, ninth with 153 and North Carolina, tenth with 132.

MODERN BEAUTY PARLORS PRESCRIBE GYMNASTICS

Modern physicians agree that in order to be beautiful, one must by all means be healthy. Health and beauty are within reach of all. Your MODEL T FORD is still a good car

THE Model T Ford led the motor industry for twenty years because of its sturdy worth, reliability and economy. Those same reasons continue to make it a good car.

As a matter of fact, nearly one-fourth of all the automobiles in use today are Model T Fords. Millions of them can be driven two, three and even five more years with reasonable care and proper replacements. Figures show that the average life is seven years.

Don't sacrifice your Model T, therefore, but take it to the Ford dealer and have him estimate on the cost of putting it in A1 shape. A very small expenditure may be the means of giving you thousands of miles of additional service.

For a labor charge of $20 to $25 you can have your motor and transmission completely overhauled. This price includes new bearings, reboring cylinders and any other work necessary. Parts are extra.

Valves can be ground and carbon removed for $3 to $4. The cost of tightening all main bearings is only $6. The labor charge for overhauling the front axle is $4.50 to $5—rear axle assembly, $5.75 to $7.

New universal joint will be installed for a labor charge of $3. Brake shoes relined for $1.50. Rear spring and perches rebushed for $1.75. The cost of overhauling the starting motor is $3. A labor charge of approximately $2.50 covers the overhauling of the generator.

It will pay you, therefore, to see your Ford dealer and have him put your Model T in good running order. By doing so you will protect and maintain the investment you have in your car and get months and years of reliable transportation at a very low cost per mile.

ORLAND PARK

H. Adele Cooper, president of the Orland Park P. T. A., who represented her organization at the state P. T. A. convention at Mattoon, Ill., last week, reports a very busy and interesting trip. She received high commendations from the state officers for the local association for the constructive work which has been accomplished in the past year, the first of its existence and considering the size of our community and the limited field, the Orland P. T. A. averaged close up to the top. While our publicity scrap book did not win any prize, it received favorable mention, due largely to the amount of space so generously given it in The News-Bulletin.

Van Buren Knox, a former resident of Orland Park, who has been living in Chicago for the past two years, contemplates returning to Orland to make his home here again.

At the organization meeting of the Orland Park School Board (Dist. No. 135) James E. Creer was re-elected president, and Sherman S. Knox was re-elected secretary for the third time.

Rain and fog did their best to spoil the buncos party given by the Ladies Guild of the Orland Lutheran church last Wednesday evening, but in spite of this, a goodly turnout was present.

A quilting bee was on the program for the monthly meeting of the Orland Park Methodist Church Ladies Guild which met Thursday at the home of Mrs. Ben Hauss. The hostesses were Mrs. Ben Hauss, Mrs. Ralph Hauss, and Mrs. Sherman S. Knox.

Tom Davidson who has been quite ill for the past couple weeks as the result of a heart attack, is reported as feeling much better.

John A. Kline, Republican committeeman of Orland Park, is reported as being on a special trip to Springfield—business or politics?

Rumor still persists that the State is to take over the Southwest Highway and continue its construction on from Orland to St. Louis.

Ralph Jennings and the newly elected members of the village council, Edgar Cooper, Henry Waje, William Kollman and Fred Uthe were duly installed into office at the Village Board meeting last Monday evening.

Sherman S. Knox, village collector reports receiving the assessment rolls on Special Assessments numbers 6 and 8 and bills will be in the mails in the course of the next few days.

The Mokena School Base-ball team took a fall out of the Orland Nine last Tuesday.

Wm. Hoffman, former police officer at Orland and for the past two years on the police department of La Grange has been promoted to the office of Lieutenant on the La Grange force.

Wm. Raney, Orland Park contractor, and developer of Raney's Subdivision is operating a very successful grocery and market in Ashburn.

The special assessors appointed to make a survey and re-assessment of Orland property have been very busy during the past week and have just about completed their work.

Ben Hauss, genial Wabash conductor is back on the Orland—Chicago suburban run and is kept busy shaking hands with his old friends.

Lemont High School is staging a repetition of its very successful play at the Orland Park School Auditorium on Saturday night.

Judge Louis C. Raschke, recently re-elected Justice of the Peace, has again qualified for the office.

The piano pupils of Mrs. H. Adele Cooper will present their annual recital at the Orland Park M. E. church on Wednesday evening, May 8 at 7 p. m. standard time. There will be twenty-one numbers on the program.

WENR Will Broadcast 2 Hour Musical Program

A thirty piece symphony orchestra under the direction of Morgan L. Eastman; a trained choir of one hundred voices led by Dr. Daniel Protheroe, and a special sermon with Joan of Arc as the theme, by Dr. Frederick F. Shannon, noted Chicago divine, are features that are to mark one of the most pretentious church broadcasts ever given.

It will be heard over WENR, the 50,000 watt Chicago station, Sunday morning, May 5th, starting at 9 a. m., central standard time, and lasting for two hours.

Arrangements for this unusual musical and religious presentation have just been completed by Mr. Eastman and Dr. Shannon, who is the pastor of the Central Church of Chicago, the services of which are held each Sunday in Orchestra Hall. Dr. Shannon and the Central Church have achieved a national reputation for these services and weekly visitors in Chicago from all over the world.

Under the plan worked out, the service itself will have as a prelude an hour of music by the symphony orchestra, which will play in the studios of WENR. Mr. Eastman has selected special symphony music for the occasion. The numbers will be so arranged as to weave into an unusual mosaic the spirit of France. Most of the compositions will be by French composers. Among them will be the famous overture, "Maximilian Robespierre", by Henry Litoff. The solo selections, which will include the "Marseillaise" and other French songs and arias, will be given by a selected group of vocalists.

The choir, under Dr. Protheroe, will present a specially arranged program with pipe organ accompaniment and selected soloists. This will be followed by the service and Dr. Shannon's sermon.

The broadcast has been arranged in commemoration of one of the most historic episodes in the life of Joan of Arc, the Maid of Orleans. According to historical data, this peasant maid, at the age of thirteen, was inspired by "voices in the air". She believed them to belong to Saint Michael, Saint Catherine and Saint Margaret. It was a time in French history when the English King, Henry VI, had nearly completed his French conquest. Acting under the instructions of the "voices", Joan of Arc donned men's clothes. She had been advised that she was to become "chief in war". The Dauphin of France, Charles VII, at first skeptical, resolved to employ her after he had heard her story. A suit of armor was prepared and she had a white banner made representing Christ holding the world. This she carried into battle.

At this particular time, the English had nearly succeeded in the capture of Orleans. From May 4 to May 8, 1429, Joan of Arc lead the French troops against the English forces and the latter were compelled to raise the siege against the city. From then on she was known as the Maid of Orleans. Her patriotic spirit kindled the national ardor of the French, and she became the dread of the previously triumphant English.

It is to commemorate this stirring event in the history of the French nation that the broadcast is to be presented.

Now You Can Have ELECTRIC LIGHT On Your Farm

Every farmer wants electric service and plans to have it some day.

With adequate electric light in his barns, the chores can be speeded up as fast on winter mornings and evenings as if they were done in broad daylight. There is no stumbling over things left out of place, or groping in the hay for a buckle or strap that drops. The harness comes down from its peg and over on the horse without lost motion or tangled rein. Waste is stopped. Abundant light avoids spilling grain in feeding and prevents tipping over milk buckets. It aids in keeping the barns clean and safe.

In the home, too, where "woman's work is never done," electricity speeds every-day tasks and helps make the family more comfortable and happy.

A New Plan for Extending ELECTRIC SERVICE to Farms

A new plan has been worked out, largely through the advice of farmers, which we believe will hasten farm electrification. A post card mailed to us will bring a special farm representative who will explain complete details of the plan, without obligation to you.

Save Washington's Tree
Tree surgeons have succeeded in keeping alive the last of the chestnut trees planted by George Washington at Fredericksburg, Va. There were thirteen trees, one for each of the colonies that became states in the United States. The seedlings were placed in the ground with due ceremony by the Father of Our Country on a day dedicated especially for the occasion.

Ants had burrowed through the heart of the surviving tree, but surgeons have filled the hollow with concrete and its existence has been prolonged for a few years.

OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

"They are charging us!" cried the Onondaga. And sounding his war-whoop he fired at the figures now swiftly bounding forward.

I also fired and stopped a savage. But I did not believe the affair would amount to anything more than an exchange of shots between the scouts until I recognized Captain Beaujeu at the head of a mixed force of French and Indians. On the breast of his fringed hunting-shirt was a silver gorget, a pleasing target had I not emptied my rifle at the savage.

A moment after I fired, Beaujeu halted and waved his hat above his head, and the Indians scattered to left and right. I would have believed the enemy was retreating had not the Canadians and regulars remained to hold the road against us.

While I was reloading, Mr. Gordon of the engineers came up and was the first of the regulars to behold the enemy. It seemed to be a most foolhardy thing for two hundred Frenchmen to dispute the Duquesne road against our proud army. I began to realize we were in for something more than a skirmish when a heavy fire opened on us from ahead and from both sides. Round Paw and I both hugged the ground and retired to the right.

A terrific howling and yelling was started by the savages, a sinister chorus that encompassed the road for some distance. Gage's troops seemed to be confused by the fiendish clamor and the invisibility of the foe. The men staggered under the cruel fire, then rallied and began emptying their muskets in volleys. But there was nothing to shoot at except the slim French force ahead. Before they could fall back from the jaws of the trap, St. Clair's working force came up on the run to pile confusion on confusion. Gage felt the reinforcements behind him and ordered his men to charge straight ahead and eliminate the Frenchmen. The head of his column was speedily wiped out, and the rest were sadly staggered by the fierce fire.

A gun was rushed up to support the pioneers, and at the third discharge of the piece, Beaujeu fell dead, dying gallantly as became a Chevalier of St. Louis. Captain Dumas took his place, and for a while the fighting was stubbornly maintained by both sides, with neither, apparently, securing any distinct advantage, but with the English sustaining heavy punishment. General Braddock persisted in sending heavy masses of men up the road, whereas he should have fallen back until he could have cleared the woods on both sides of the road.

During this portion of the fight, the Onondaga and I shifted about and took turns firing, and taking care that one of our rifles should be loaded at all times. On three different occasions we were charged by small bands of savages, but the second unexpected shot from behind the same tree always spoiled the attack and sent the red man back to where the killing was easier.

Then Braddock's mechanical discipline began to give ground before the marksmanship of the enemy. We sealed our fate by remaining astraddle the ravine. Braddock, furious almost to the point of incoherence, pushed Burton forward with the vanguard, thus making the congestion worse; for the road was but twelve feet wide.

Burton formed his troops under a most galling fire and had just finished the difficult maneuver when Gage's forces fell back rapidly to form behind him.

Then occurred the definite shift in our firing. We had been sustaining terrible punishment, the penalty of being caught in column, but we had the superiority of numbers to permit heavy losses. But now the two regiments became badly mixed and stumbled about in the smoke-filled road like sheep. There was smoke everywhere. The woods were choked with it, the road was blotted out at times by it. Sheets of fire rippled along the very edges of the narrow way. The two regimental colors were advanced in opposite directions. The officers were being picked off at an alarming rate, and the regulars had not been taught self-dependence.

Some of the enemy's guns were thrust from the foliage into the very faces of the victims. There were many soldiers in that battle who did not see an Indian. Down the line they were delivering their fire at two hundred yards, thereby throwing it away. With the ancient forest closely hemming in the road, with no foe visible, the army was as helpless as a blind man.

It has been repeatedly charged again Braddock that he had no flankers out on the Wednesday afternoon of July ninth. Such statements are untrue. We had flankers out to a hundred yards or more on both sides of the army, but we did not scout far enough ahead of the army. There was no ambushade, however. Once the fighting commenced, the flankers were shot down by the haphazard volleys of our own artillery. How many Englishmen and provincials England killed that day will never be known, but the French and their allies accounted for only a portion of our dead and wounded.

As Round Paw and I fell back through the woods on the right of the road and risked death at every step from the fire of our own men, I caught a glimpse of General Braddock. His horse was down and he was striking a man with the flat of his sword to drive him from the shelter of a tree where the fellow had very sensibly taken refuge.

An aide supplied the commander with a fresh mount, just as young Washington, bare-headed, his eyes blazing, reined in his frantic horse and loudly urged, "Get them out of this slaughter-pen! Into the woods!"

"By G—d, I'm commander here, sir! They'll fight here! We must advance!" roared the general, his heavy face suffused with anger. "You d—d sheep, close up! Close up there!" The last to a squad of men who were trying to tree themselves. And he was riding them down to get back into the road to be slaughtered like sheep. Sir Peter Halket, who with four hundred men was guarding the baggage train, came through the thick smoke and yelled a request that the men be ordered to find shelter.

"Damnation!" thundered the general. "Did I lead his majesty's regulars out here to hide from a parcel of naked beggars? Advance! We must advance!" Then he was raging down on those delinquents, whose years of training were being swept aside by the instinct of self-preservation. "Curse you! Get back there!" And the flat of his sword beat them soundly over head and shoulders.

Washington wheeled, his horse bumping into Sir Peter's mount, and either to that gentleman, or in apostrophe to the whole terrible situation, he cried:

"By G—d! My Virginians shan't be slaughtered!" With that he was plunging through the smoke to the edge of the growth where Round Paw and I, and some riflemen, were treeing ourselves. He shouted, "Captain Waggoner, tree yourself! Clear this side of the road!"

Captain Waggoner raised his hand and penetrated deeper into the growth. Eighty men, all excellent rifle shots, streamed after him. The Onondaga and I kept abreast of the captain. He did not attempt to make his voice heard above the infernal din, but pointed to the rising ground, on the brow of which extended a fallen tree that must have measured at the least five feet in diameter. Once behind that stout barricade I knew Waggoner's men would soon clear that side of the road, and then could circle around the head of the army and drive the savages from the terrible ravine. Now we were in the trap; General Braddock's solution was the only one. The army must advance. We lost three men by the enemy by gaining the hill; and then the crazy mob in the road poured a volley into our rear that killed fifty men!

A few remained on the hill for safety's sake. The rest took their luck below in the woods, striving to keep on the outskirts of the enemy's line. The Onondaga and I fell back, fighting from tree to tree and striving to reach the wagon train. The afternoon was wearing away and from the triumphant howls of the French Indians we knew the army was practically surrounded. The Onondaga, glistening with sweat and ferocious for closer fighting, yelled in my ear:

"They say we shall die like brave men!"

I did not desire to be slaughtered, as the uselessly heroic never appealed to me. But the Dinwold girl was cooped up inside the devilish circle and there are certain things a man must always do. She was of my race and I was especially bound to find her. With the Onondaga the case was different. He had a fair chance of winning clear of the terrible mistake, and I urged him to do so. He asked me if I would keep with him, and when I answered that I must find the witch-woman he whooped hoarsely and took the lead in a line that ran parallel to the blood-soaked road.

We heard the drums sound the retreat and knew that Braddock was dead or had lost his haughty pride. We heard the firing down the line as the enemy attacked Halket's men at the baggage-train, and from the lessening volume of the return fire we knew our losses must be tremendous, or else the ammunition was falling.

At the time Braddock ordered the retreat to be sounded only a third of the army was left. We learned that much afterward. The smoke made it impossible to see clearly, and the individual combats between rangers and savages served to confuse further our sense of direction. I remember the Onondaga giving a mighty grunt as he crashed his ax through the head of a Huron who bumped into us. I recall mechanically staying in another red skull with the butt of my loaded rifle. And then to my surprise both the Indian and I were in the road, surrounded by the dead and dying, and those who fired blindly, and more often killed a friend than they wounded a foe.

"These men are fools!" cried the Onondaga, dodging a blow from a musket swung by a madman. "The woods! The woods!"

But now we were in the road it was most difficult to leave it without being shot in the back; yet to remain in the frenzied crowd meant death without a chance to strike back. We were only a short distance above the baggage-train, and toward it we began making our way. Guns were spurring flame from the bushes at our feet. The guards were pointing their muskets high and firing thin volleys into the foliage. Once the retreat was sounded a panic had seized upon the survivors, and in a stumbling, insane rush those who could walk made a last attempt to reach the river.

The howling of the Indians increased in volume as they realized the extent of their unexpected triumph. A few hours back the fort Indians had flatly refused to follow Beaujeu, and now they were lusting like demons to kill, kill, until not an Englishman was left alive. The savages, observing the mad fear now possessing the army, grew bolder and began to appear from behind the great trees, from under the grape and pea-vines, and through the tall grass. Gory hands darted out to seize some dead or dying man and drag him into the cover. The best equipped and proudest army England had ever sent to North America was a rabble of crazy men.

Captain Orme of the regulars, and Captain Stewart of the Virginia riflemen, aided by another American officer I did not know, came through the mass bearing a heavy figure. It was General Braddock and he was puffing for breath and was wounded through the chest.

"Braddock's killed! Braddock's killed!" was the despairing cry raised as the commander was carried to the rear.

"Rally the fools at the ford," gasped the commander.

"Braddock's killed!" howled a drill sergeant, although he must have heard his general speak.

And he danced up and down until red hands shot out from the bushes and caught him by the ankles and jerked him from our sight.

Colonel Washington now had all the riflemen fighting in the Indian fashion, and only his maneuver saved the army from being annihilated. As it was, four hundred and fifty officers and men were dead, slain outright, and nearly as many more wounded. Out of eighty-nine commissioned officers sixty-three were killed or wounded; and not a field-officer had escaped unhurt. Lean Virginians from behind trees were shouting encouragement to one another and calling for the regulars to fall back out of the way and cross the river. It was the first time our riflemen and England's carefully drilled regulars had gone into battle together, and already the colonials were discovering they were better men for forest fighting.

Dainty Feeding Not Possible With Gull

Gluttony a vice? Not so to the river gull of black-tipped wings. In the Northwest it swoops down and snatches fish from the very hands of anglers and, fighting off thousands of its fellows, proves that gluttony is a virtue enabling the one that can most speedily swallow to survive. Whole flocks of these bold and ruthless birds hover around the salmon fishers and watch their twitching lines sunk deep in the Columbia, says a writer in the Portland Oregonian, and 20 will sometimes strike for the flopping prize. The victor must swallow quickly as he darts upward beating off the buffings of his greedy rivals. Sometimes he must swallow a fish so large that in its new position it destroys his aerial balance and down he goes to the waves. The Indians of the North west have a legend that a giant once became so annoyed with the winged robbers that he caught a whole flock of them into his campfire. Hence, they say, the black-tipped wings.

WHAT HILKIAH FOUND IN THE TEMPLE

LESSON TEXT—II Chron. 34:14-33.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Finding a Lost Book.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Finding a Lost Book.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Discovering a Guidebook.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Bible in National Life.

1. The Book of the Law Found (vv. 14-17).

1. The occasion (v. 14).
It was while restoring the temple during Josiah's reformation that the Book of the Law was discovered. No doubt, in clearing out the dark corners to make repairs and to find a place to store the subscriptions made by the people, many things which had been lost were found, among which was the law. This was "the law of the Lord given by Moses."

2. The book delivered to the king (vv. 15-17).

In a report of the work, the king was informed of the finding of the Book of the Law by Hilkiah, and the book was delivered to him.

11. The Effect of the Reading of the Law (vv. 18-28).

Shaphan, the scribe, read the law before the king.

1. The king rent his clothes (v. 19).
As the law was read before him, the king was led to realize the awful extent of the nation's departure from God. He knew that sin merited punishment. The function of the law is to reveal sin. The reading of the royal robes indicated that the king was penitent and sorrowful.

2. The king sent a deputation to make inquiry of the Lord (vv. 20, 21).

The king included himself in guilt before God. "Go inquire for me and for them that are left—for great is the wrath of the Lord that is poured out upon us." His sense of sin was so keen that he sent to inquire of the Lord as to whether there was any means of diverting the divine judgments. Instinctively, the human heart turns from God's threatening judgments to a means of escape. The law prepared for the gospel. The law is our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ (Gal. 3:24).

3. The message of Huldah, the prophetess (vv. 22-28).

(1) Confirmation of what the law said (vv. 22-25).

She said that all the curses written in the law must fall, for the sins had been so flagrant that God's wrath could not be restrained. Destruction was hanging over Jerusalem and it was too late to avert it. It was not too late, however, to repent and to obtain mercy from God, but the outward consequences of sin must be realized. Fulfillment of this is found on every hand today. The murderer must hang.

(2) Acceptance of Josiah's repentance (vv. 26-28).

Because of his tenderness of heart and deep penitence, the Lord said he should be gathered to his grave in peace and should not see all the evil to be brought on Jerusalem and its people. What Huldah said was true, even though Josiah died in battle (35:23-25). When God accepts a man and forgives him, his death is a peaceful one, even though it may be on the battlefield. God's presence is with him, therefore he will go straight from the battlefield to the heavenly home.

III. The Law Obeyed (vv. 29-33).

1. The king read the law (vv. 29, 30).

He gathered together the inhabitants of Jerusalem, including the priests, Levites and elders, and read unto them the law.

2. The king made a covenant before the Lord to keep His commandments and testimonies (vv. 31, 32). In this covenant he pledged himself to do three things:

(1) To walk before the Lord (v. 31). This meant that he would get personally right with God.

(2) To keep God's commandments, testimonies and statutes with all his heart and soul (v. 31). To read the law is not enough. Its holy requirements must be obeyed.

(3) To perform the words of the covenant, which were written in the book (v. 31). This was done sincerely and he caused all that were present "to stand to it."

3. The king took away the abominations out of all the countries which pertained to Israel (v. 33). All the days of the king they departed not from following after the Lord, the God of their fathers.

The Camel and the Rich Man

And Jesus looked round about, and said unto his disciples, How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God! It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.—Mark 10:23-25.

What Will you do

When your Children Cry for It

There is hardly a household that hasn't heard of Castoria! At least five million homes are never without it. If there are children in your family, there's almost daily need of its comfort. And any night may find you very thankful there's a bottle in the house. Just a few drops, and that colic or constipation is relieved; or diarrhea checked. A vegetable product; a baby remedy meant for young folks. Castoria is about the only thing you have ever heard doctors advise giving to infants. Stronger medicines are dangerous to a tiny baby, however harmless they may be to grown-ups. Good old Castoria! Remember the name, and remember to buy it. It may spare you a sleepless, anxious night. It is always ready, always safe to use; in emergencies, or for everyday ailments. Any hour of the day or night that Baby becomes fretful, or restless, Castoria was never more popular with mothers than it is today. Every druggist has it.

Temptation to Ghosts

If the dead can come back and move tables, why don't they tip over some of the hideous bronzes erected to them?—Detroit News.

ORLAND PARK

Mrs. Paul Sanders and Mrs. Earle Holt are on a vacation trip in Wisconsin and plan to visit the home folks of Prof. Holt as well as the family of Mrs. Sanders.

Hard luck has hit the family of Louis Arnold, Jr., a double wallop. Some time ago Louis developed an infection in the index finger of his right hand and it has been necessary to remove a section of the bone. On top of this his baby daughter Dorothy May was taken ill with a mastoid complication and is reported to be in a very serious condition.

The players of the Lemont High School presented their play "The Ghost Bird" at the Orland Park School last Saturday night. The play was well acted and well received but owing to the small amount of publicity which had been given it was poorly attended.

Several ladies of the Methodist Guild have been busy throughout the week stitching on the 2 quilts which were commenced last week at the meeting held at the home of Mrs. Ben Hauss.

Work has been recommenced on the Orland Park section of the Southwest Highway.

Timm's Motor Sales Graham-Paige Sales and Service

Timm's Motor Sales is located at 637 East Jefferson Street in Joliet. Phone 3824 and they will place a car at your disposal.

The Graham-Paige, which was introduced to the motoring public last year, comes to you now, a finer, more luxurious and more resplendent car than ever.

Timm's Motor Sales are most enthusiastic over the Graham-Paige line of cars and cordially invite you to come in and inspect the complete line of sixes and eights, with their refinements and improvements.

They have ever kept abreast of the times and offer you a car from a manufacturer who has proven that they are abreast of the times by the car they produce.

The new Graham-Paige has a longer wheel-base and increased power, with a superior smoothness and flexibility due to the engine refinements. Centralized chassis lubrication is a noteworthy feature of the largest six and both eights and the Graham-Paige four-speed transmission, with two high speeds, direct and semi-direct is on all but the smallest six.

Especially notable is the treatment of the molding on the 612 and 615 models, which runs back from the radiator shell, sweeping upward at the front corner posts. Its graceful curve continues in the type brackets that support the visor. We urge you to see these noteworthy cars at Timm's Motor Sales in Joliet.

Bodies are of the original design, the roof treatment at the rear is a departure from the ordinary. Top and back intersect to form a curved line across the rear of the body, which produces a high light instead of a smoothly rounded surface.

Special de luxe features of interior trim and equipment are featured on the larger models while all are up-holstered in finest coverings.

The management of this establishment is in the hands of dependable business men who will gladly discuss with you the merits of these wonderful cars. You will find them pleasing and obliging at all times and in making this Farmers' and Business Men's Review we wish to compliment them upon the commendable manner in which they conduct their business. The first essential to a beautiful home is the wall decorations. No matter whether they are covered with paper or artistically painted they must be pleasing to the eye. Discriminating people have learned that you will find the best possible assortment of wall paper at the Daras Wall Paper & Paint Store in Joliet.

SWEET CLOVER AS FORAGE CROP

Sweet clover has long been recognized as a forage crop but only recently has its value been appreciated and a place allotted it in our agricultural program. The principal causes for the lack of appreciation of this crop are: (1) the tendency of the stems to become very coarse and woody when the plants come into blossom, (2) its aggressiveness on many waste places and (3) the bitter taste which makes it unpalatable until stock become accustomed to it.

If a hay crop is desired, the coarse, woody stems may be almost entirely eliminated by cutting at the proper time. The aggressiveness of the plant makes it very valuable as a soil improver, especially upon lands that have been cultivated over a long period and are low in organic matter and available plant nutrients. Sweet clover does not become a pest in cultivated fields or in pastures. Stock will become accustomed to the peculiar taste of sweet clover in a very few days and will eat the hay or pasture as readily as clover or bluegrass.

Sweet clover is rapidly gaining in favor in this state as a pasture crop for all classes of live stock. It is especially well suited as a pasture crop for cattle and sheep, due to the fact that it very seldom causes bloat. Horses do well on sweet clover and hogs may be pastured on it advantageously when there is a sufficient amount of live stock, such as, sheep and cattle grazing to keep it down. However, alfalfa is proving more popular as a pasture crop for hogs.

Sweet clover has several advantages as a pasture crop. One of the outstanding of these is the fact that growth starts rather early in the spring and continues throughout the hot, dry summer months when June grass and other pastures are likely to be rather short.

Grazing should begin when the plants are from six to eight inches high, and sufficient live stock should be maintained on the pasture to keep the growth down to knee high at the most. If the plants get much taller than this they become woody, the bitterness increases rapidly and the quality of the pasturage decreases. When it is noticed that the growth is gaining too rapidly on the live stock, clipping the sweet clover to about eight inches high is advisable.

The carrying capacity of sweet clover pastures is exceptionally heavy. It varies of course with the season and with the soil, but as a rule it may be expected to accommodate one head per acre throughout the growing season. Under very favorable conditions three or four head of live stock may be pastured on one acre.

One of the most frequent mistakes made in pasturing sweet clover is having insufficient live stock on the pasture to keep the growth subdued. The pasture will last much later in the second year if the growth is pastured fairly heavy. This heavy pasturing prevents the plants from forming seed. When seed is allowed to form, plants drop their leaves and die. The cumarin or bitter substance of young, succulent shoots is much lower than that of older, more mature plants. When the season is exceedingly dry and long the cumarin content sometimes gets so high that the plants cease to be palatable.

At one time it was thought by many farmers that sweet clover would not be eaten by most kinds of live stock. The success secured the past few seasons by many farmers of the state has shown conclusively that sweet clover is well liked by all kinds of live stock when they once become accustomed to it. The best time to start live stock on sweet clover pasture is in the early spring when the cumarin content of the young plants is rather low.

Cattle and sheep very seldom bloat when on sweet clover pasture. If cattle or sheep are very hungry and the sweet clover plants are wet, there is some danger. Sweet clover is much safer in this respect than alfalfa or June clover.

Cattle, when allowed sweet clover pasture only, frequently crave some dry roughage. This is much more noticeable during a wet year, due to the extremely succulent nature of sweet clover pasture. Usually this craving may be satisfied by allowing the cattle to have the run of a straw stack.

The fact that sweet clover pasture is succulent, however, is a decided advantage in the case of dairy cattle. A high flow of milk can be secured only when succulent feed is available. When June grass pasture becomes dry, it is necessary to feed ensilage to supply succulence. This is seldom necessary, however, with sweet clover pasturage.

The bulk of sweet clover pasture is produced the second season. However, if conditions are at all favorable considerable pasture may be secured during the late summer and fall of the first season. Owing to the peculiar bud formation of the sweet clover plant the first season, there is little danger of over-pasturing.

Some top growth, however, should be left for protection during the winter. Sweet clover may be used as pasture more advantageously in a rotation than as a permanent pasture.

The feeding value of sweet clover pasture is very high due to the fact that the plants contain a high percentage of protein as well as minerals. Nitrogen, potassium, and calcium are abundant in sweet clover.

He has a natural aptitude for this work and to this fact his eminent success is perhaps due. He fully enjoys doing all phases of the work. He is careful, conscientious in the drilling, extracting, etc., and would not cause his patients pain if it could possibly be avoided. He is past master in the usage of anti-pain measures, both of local anesthetics and gasses, and certainly wouldn't care to extract a tooth for a patient without using one of these processes.

If people could know the many ills that neglected teeth can cause, they certainly wouldn't delay the visit to the dentist. So many ills have been traced to the decayed or infected teeth that the first thing the doctor asks you about is your teeth, and advises an X-ray at once. Many people seemingly, have a perfect set of teeth, yet are not well, and upon having the teeth X-rayed, find puss bags have formed at the roots and are throwing poisons through their systems.

Dr. Kamin in Joliet has equipped his office with all modern and scientific equipment for his profession. His office is always immaculate and the dental tools sterilized and ready for work. The making of bridges and plates is a delicate piece of mechanism and requires mechanical as well as technical knowledge. He makes a specialty of both bridges and plates and there is not any branch of the profession in which he is not skillful.

Take the children to this prominent dentist at least twice a year. Give their teeth the right start and they will follow the habit formed in these years.

Aside from his high professional standing Dr. Kamin is one of the leading citizens of the community and in this Farmers' and Business Men's Review we take pleasure in complimenting him upon his successful efforts and recommend him to all our readers. Adv.

Joliet Boiler & Machine Works, Inc.

Complete Boiler & Machine Shop Service

The Joliet Boiler & Machine Works, Inc., is located on Joliet Street in Joliet. Phone 343.

A shop with such equipment as this has prepared to do almost anything in the mechanical line. The Joliet Boiler & Machine Works, Inc., is an efficient dependable firm which has kept abreast of the times and renders a service second to none in this part of the state.

They will build special machinery just as the customer wants it and make repairs quickly, properly and most satisfactorily. For instance, a road contractor breaks one of the gears in his concrete mixer. This mixer was made in a distant city and replacement parts that fit would require days to secure. During this time the contractor would have to hold up all work and possibly pay a forfeit for not completing his contract in the specified time. At any rate he would be subject to an enormous expense, either through maintaining his force, or laying them off, and possibly have to replace some who would find jobs elsewhere.

Through this modern shop the contractor can have the machinery repaired almost immediately. The cutting torch will cut bent and twisted shafting; the welding torch will weld broken castings or gears; the machine shop quickly re-machines, refits and re-assembles. With a delay that is almost negligible the contractor is once more working efficiently. This is the impeccable service rendered by the Joliet Boiler & Machine Works, Inc., in Joliet.

Here the thresher whose engine develops leaking tubes or whose boiler requires a patch may have repairs made immediately wherever necessary and this saves the delay and loss through having his production equipment idle. The farmer, the truck fleet owner, or the ordinary citizen may have worn parts replaced, broken parts welded and machined and save many times the actual cost of the work through the convenience and saving of time by patronizing the Joliet Boiler & Machine Works, Inc., in Joliet.

The managers of this institution are men of wide experience, justly capable of engineering such efficient production.

The service of this institution is of inestimable value to the community and we desire in making this Farmers' and Business Men's Review to congratulate this section upon having an institution of such utter reliability and efficient service in their midst. Adv.

Grub in Head of Sheep Controlled by Pine Tar

The grub in the head of sheep is a larvae of a fly which lays its eggs in the nostrils of the sheep during the summer time. A little pine tar put on the nose of each sheep, that is, a little smeared on each side of the nose, next summer when the hot weather comes, will drive the fly away and help protect the sheep.

It is also a very good practice to plow a fresh furrow in the fields during hot days of June and July, when the flies are bothering. If you do so, the sheep will place their noses against the fresh soil and close the opening so that the flies will not be able to reach them. It is interesting to see how quickly sheep will arrange themselves along a furrow of this kind as soon as the fly appears.

This creature that you have found is not the true "gid," but the false gid. The true gid is the embryo of tapeworm.

The matter of getting rid of the grub in the heads of sheep would be a situation to be dealt with by a veterinarian.

A clean-up day is often advisable on many farms. It gives an opportunity to put things away and makes the farm more attractive.

ROOT AND TUBER CROPS

Seed Potatoes—Evidence obtained by the Utah station in Cache Valley indicated that with Rural potatoes mosaic and other diseases can be avoided by hill selection.

The Nebraska station found that seed potatoes about equal in productiveness were produced in all parts of the State. Most "running out" of seed potatoes seemed primarily due to disease, environment being a secondary factor in providing conditions for infection and insect carriers. No lots of seed potatoes obtained were entirely free from all known virus diseases. As was also the case at the Utah station, greenhouse tuber indexing appeared entirely satisfactory for eliminating the various mosaic diseases.

Time of planting on dry land and quality of seed potatoes.—A time of planting study with potatoes on dry land in western Nebraska showed that tubers of lots planted on or before June 15 were practically matured by October 2. Tubers from early plantings were lighter in color, considerably more elongated, and scabier than from lots planted later. More clean "seed size" tubers were produced with each later planting date.

Influence of soil type on seed Potatoes.—Studies at Cornell University showed that potatoes grown on muck and upland soils had whiter flesh, greater mealiness, and better flavor than those from heavier soils. The lighter, better aerated soils employed seemed better for seed production than the heavier soils. Prejudice against muck-grown seed potatoes did not seem warranted.

Type of Seed Potatoes.—At the Nebraska station elongation of tubers as indicated by a reduced W-L ratio could be caused under controlled conditions by raising soil temperature, increasing soil moisture, and heavier soils. Place appeared to exert a decided effect and culture to have some influence on type. In type dry-land tubers generally surpass irrigated tubers, and in western Nebraska late plantings average better than early plantings. Such differences in type or shape in normal tubers are held to result from immediate environmental conditions of a temporary nature and not to affect yield.

Maturity of Seed Potatoes.—Observations at the Maryland station on Irish Cobbler tubers dug at six growth stages from full bloom to the time when vines were brown and dry, indicated that the ripening and maturing processes in potatoes may continue during storage, so that by the end of the rest period immature potatoes large enough for seed have practically the same percentage composition and respiratory response as potatoes allowed to mature on the vine and stored similarly.

Dormancy and Tuberization of Potatoes.—Exposure of potato tubers to certain gaseous hydrocarbons and esters at the California station was found very effective in terminating the period of dormancy. A study of tuberization in the potato revealed a great accumulation of polysaccharides in the leaves and in the underground stem incidental to tuberization. While no starch was found in the leaves and above ground stems and little in the main underground stem or in the roots, the stolons were liberally supplied. Potato plants brought to tuberization in the warmer part of the summer formed no tubers and accumulated little carbohydrates.

Fertilizers for Potatoes.—Potatoes receiving ammonium sulphate at the New Jersey stations yielded considerably less than those getting sodium nitrate, fish scrap, or tankage. However, tubers from sodium nitrate plants were severely injured by scab, while the reverse was true on ammonium sulphate plants.

Sweet Potato Fertilizers.—Fertilizers gave profitable returns with sweet potatoes at the Arkansas station only when phosphorus and nitrogen were used together. Applying all the fertilizer under the row before planting gave best results, whereas double applications or side dressings were unprofitable.

Sweet potatoes made noticeable response to fertilizers, including potash, at the Maryland station, plants receiving potassium chloride alone or with nitrogen or with nitrogen-phosphorus giving the largest increase.

Although total yields of Porto Rico sweet potatoes were only slightly affected by fertilizer treatments at the Missouri station, the percentages of marketable roots increased when potash fertilizers were used. The use of potash fertilizer was very definitely correlated with the percentage of carbohydrates. Commercial fertilizers seemed to affect in no way the keeping qualities of the sweet potato in storage.

Most cream separators will do much better job of skimming the milk when they are warm.

This firm is one of the busiest in this part of the country. It handles various standard makes of cars that will give you most dependable and lasting service. All are used cars which simply means that the other fellow has taken the first, that is to say, the large depreciation. If you want a dependable car, one that will give you efficient performance, call on the O. D. Larson Motor Company in Joliet.

Their cars are worthy of anyone's inspection. They are in excellent condition; in many cases in better running order than when purchased new. These cars will give the purchaser superior service at a price within the reach of all.

The management of this concern is in the hands of competent men who know the car business and upon whom you can depend. They are straightforward, upright business men who have the reputation of being experts in this business.

In this day of thrift it seems like a pure waste of money to buy a car new when you are able to purchase cars which have gone but a few thousand miles, at approximately half the original price. Most of these cars have the original paint; all are of excellent appearance. You can do better in used cars at the O. D. Larson Motor Company in Joliet.

This firm has built a large and increasing business by reason of their high quality used cars at reasonable prices. Each car carries a guarantee of this firm which is absolutely reliable and dependable. There is probably no other business in which dependability counts as it does in that of used cars.

These cars may be purchased upon the deferred payment plan. Hence, again the use of the budget system by which a certain amount is allotted to the different expenses. In this way one scarcely notices the cost and you can have the use of the car in the meantime.

In this Farmers' and Business Men's Review we are pleased to compliment Mr. Brown, upon his efficient and progressive business methods and unhesitatingly recommend him to you when in the market for a used car. Adv.

Bossy Needs Care To Produce Milk

"The care and management of the family cow plays a greater part in the ability of the cow to produce a maximum flow of milk than is generally supposed," says A. C. Kimrey, extension dairy specialist for the Northern Carolina College of Agriculture and Engineers. "For highest milk production the cow must be comfortable. One of the important things towards making her comfortable is a clean, dry place in which to stay. The stall should be cleaned and bedded each day, or new bedding put in, if not possible to completely renew the old. The cow will thus be kept clean and the stall dry and fresh at all times."

Mr. Kimrey recommends that the stall be so constructed as to allow for plenty of fresh air and sunlight. A damp, dark stall is a good breeding place for disease germs which not only injure the cow but will probably be injurious to the people who drink the milk. A properly built stall should be boarded up tight for four feet above the floor so as to protect the cow's body from drafts, especially when she is lying down. Above this wall there should be plenty of windows to allow for a free passage of air and light. The cost of building such a stall will be more than paid for in the increased milk production.

During the period before freshening, the cow should be fed so that she will be in good flesh at freshening. Then she will come with a high milk flow, states Mr. Kimrey. With proper care and management she will maintain this production through haphazard conditions.

Pastor Says Church Must Sell Wares By Advertising

WEST PLAINS, Mo.—The Rev. E. R. Clarkson, pastor of the Christian church here, is a strong believer in advertising. After citing various ways in which publicity was given to Christianity and to the church in earlier days, Mr. Clarkson declared that the church should take advantage of every opportunity to advertise the things of the religious world.

"If a merchant finds it profitable to tell of his wares in the newspapers," says Mr. Clarkson, "why not the church tell of the good of Christ and the church through the same medium?"

He not only advocated use of newspapers for advertising, but called attention to the advertising being given churches through the radio.

Advise Shippers to Candle Market Eggs

ESPECIALLY URGENT DURING SPRING AND SUMMER.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

Candle all eggs before shipment, and especially during the warm spring and summer months when spoilage is most likely to occur," is the advice given to egg shippers by the bureau of chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture, which is charged with the enforcement of the federal food and drugs act. "The loss resulting from spoilage of eggs shipped to distant markets may be greatly reduced by this precaution," say the officials. Candling as near as possible to the source of production will not only save transportation charges but will prevent waste of a valuable food product.

Federal inspectors have been instructed to be on the watch for interstate shipments of adulterated eggs. Under the food and drugs act eggs which have yolks stuck to the shell, moldy eggs, black spots, mixed rots, addled eggs, and any other eggs that are filthy, decomposed or putrid are adulterated. When such shipments are found they may be seized and the individuals responsible for shipments prosecuted under the law.

Many eggs that are suitable for immediate consumption will not stand shipment to distant markets. By candling, these eggs may be taken out and sold for local consumption, leaving only those that have a good chance to reach the market in edible condition.

A bulletin on candling eggs tells just how to distinguish between a good egg and one that is likely to spoil in transit. Write to the Bureau of Chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., for a copy.

Care of Cream

As long as creameries receive an inferior quality of cream, they are forced to pay inferior prices for butter fat. Cream that is sweet and clean in flavor is the type of cream that will command the best prices. One of the most important steps in the production of such cream is to cool it in cold water immediately after separation. The cost of cooling tanks for the purpose is very small. Such an investment is a profit maker for the dairyman.

Spring-time is nurse-time on the farm. Chicks, pigs and lambs all pay big returns for time spent on them while they are getting their start.

POTATO STORAGE

A potato tuber undergoes gradual physiological changes during the storage period that must be taken into consideration in storage practice. After digging, the tubers are in a resting stage for about three months, and during this period they are easily stored. This resting stage of late varieties ends in January, and the tubers will then sprout if the temperature is above 41 degrees F. At this time, however, it is usually very easy to hold storage cellars or storage houses below 41 degrees, the only difficulty being to keep the potatoes from freezing. With the advent of warm weather in the spring the problem of holding potatoes becomes more difficult, the tendency to sprout carbohydrate also increase, with the increases, and losses of moisture and result that the tubers shrink even in cold storage.

This gradual increase in physiological activity from a resting stage to an active sprouting stage goes on under all storage conditions and in all varieties. No methods have been found for retarding these international changes. However, as the storage cycle starts at the time the plant dies or the tubers are dug, potatoes dug in September are in a more active state in the spring than those dug in October. Therefore, tubers from plants that remain green until frost are easier to keep in good condition than tubers from plants that die earlier.

This is the explanation of the fact that Ohio late potatoes keep better in ordinary cellar storage than potatoes from regions of early frosts farther north.

WHERE FIELD BEANS ARE PRODUCED IN QUANTITY

Michigan, California, New York, and Idaho lead in field bean production. Although Minnesota has considerable areas of land well suited to field bean production, the acreage has increased very slowly. In 1923 and 1924 it averaged 10,000 acres with an average yield of 10.5 bushels per acre. An increase in acreage to 25,000 will provide only what is needed for consumption within the state. Conditions for growing this crop are not so favorable in some of the nearby states as in Minnesota. A good market can probably be found in these states for any surplus produced here.

FEEDING SPRING PIGS FOR MARKET

[By C. M. Vestal, Agricultural Experiment Station Purdue University]

1. Fattening on full feed of grain on pasture for early fall market.
2. Growing on limited feed of grain on pasture followed by full feeding for late fall or winter market.

The majority of spring pigs are marketed in the late fall and early winter, a period generally characterized on the hog market by heavy runs and low prices. On the other hand the small end of the crop is marketed in late summer and early fall at peak prices, taking one year with another.

Why does this condition prevail in marketing spring pigs?

How can the farmer take advantage of it?

There are two outstanding reasons why the condition exists. First the majority of farms are not adequately equipped for raising early spring pigs, and the large number of late pigs swells the late fall and winter market supplies. Second, inferior animals, poor feeding and mismanagement are contributing causes to delays in marketing many of the early pigs.

If the farmer is to take advantage of the situation he must be equipped to raise early farrowed pigs, must use good breeding stock and feed well. A slip in any one of these essentials will surely defeat his aim in obtaining the high market price.

It would be folly, however, to even suggest that every hog raiser attempt to put his spring pigs on the early market. There are factors other than those mentioned which must be considered in comparing the merits of early and late marketing of spring pigs. It is the purpose of this bulletin to consider some of these factors, and especially those relating to methods of feeding.

The general methods of feeding spring pigs for market in the corn belt states may be classed as follows:

1. Fattening on full feed of grain on pasture for early fall market.
2. Growing on limited feed of grain on pasture followed by full feeding for late fall or winter market.

Some advantages of the first method:

(a) Market price of hogs is usually higher.
(b) The spring pigs are out of the way before fall litters come.

Some advantages of the second method:

(a) Maximum utilization of forage crops.
(b) Hogs may be used to harvest corn or follow cattle.

These, and perhaps other advantages are self evident but more information relating to gains, feed requirements, costs, and use of forage crops is needed to give a fair basis for comparing the merits of the two methods.

A series of feeding trials is in progress at this station to secure some information on these questions.

The results of seven trials which have been completed in the series are reported in this bulletin. Three of these trials were on clover, three on alfalfa and one on rape pasture. They were conducted in 1920, 1921, 1922, and 1923. The trials on clover and alfalfa were begun after the removal of a hay crop from the pasture lots. The grain rations used were as follows:

For the full feeding method—Shelled corn and 60 per cent. protein tankage self fed free choice.

For the limited grain method—Shelled corn 95 parts and tankage 5 parts by weight mixed and hand fed twice daily in limited quantity while on pasture, and shelled corn and tankage self fed free choice during the finishing period in dry lot.

March and April pigs which averaged 74, 62, 68 and 76 pounds were used in the various trials. They were fed to market weight of 219, 208, 220, and 221 pounds. The most of these pigs were raised on the Experimental Swine Farm. They were sired by Duroc Jersey boars and were out of Duroc Jersey and Poland China sows. During the suckling period they were self fed a mixed ration of 800 pounds corn, 20 pounds wheat shorts and 10 pounds tankage, and had access to blue grass and timothy pasture. From weaning time until the pigs were started in the experiment shelled corn, wheat shorts, tankage and a mineral mixture composed of 10 pounds wood ashes, 10 pounds 16 per cent. acid phosphate and 1 pound common salt, were fed free choice in self feeders. In most instances good clover or alfalfa pasture was used during this period.

All of the pigs were weaned at eight weeks of age and were in good thrifty condition when put into the experimental lots.

Even three-leaf clovers bring good luck if you have plenty of them.

SUMMER LAYERS

There are a few points to watch in the flock of layers this month, one of which is the feeding. Grain should be fed at the rate of 8 pounds per 100 birds per day, at the same time keeping the dry mash before them constantly. The longer the birds can be kept in good condition of flesh, the less the possibility is of a molt. But don't let them get too fat. And the allowance of grain mentioned can only serve as a pointer; the condition of the birds must be the final guide.

Where hens are not yarded, it is well to keep them confined to the henhouse until about four or five o'clock in the afternoon, at which time they can be let out until dark. The advantage of this is that hens will not be wandering all over the place; there will be no stolen nests, since the birds will have laid by this time; there will be less trouble with dirty eggs, as hens will not be tracking mud in on the nests on damp days; birds will really be more comfortable in the houses in hot weather, especially if there is no shade near the houses. Insure a good circulation of air so the breeze may blow along the floor; windows near the floor should be provided if this system is used.

If birds are not confined as suggested, shade must be provided in the yards, otherwise the birds will not venture out to any extent. Green food is essential. Rape or kale make good crops for the laying yards. Lice and mites must be fought. Sodium fluoride or a good lice powder for the lice and a spraying of a coal-tar solution for the mites should control them.

KEEP HEIFER GROWING TO MAKE BEST DAIRY PROFIT

Start them quick and keep them growing, is the way to raise profitable dairy heifers. This practice needs to be stressed at this time of the year, because heifers will soon be suffering from short pastures and lack of feed. These short pastures and scanty feed will slow up the growth of the heifers and, in some cases, actually stunt them for life, thus cutting down their efficiency as mature cows. Just as it is important in economical milk production to have cows give a large flow of milk so that there may be a profit left above the expense of keep, so it is important to have heifers grow fast. Only in this way can they use the smallest percentage possible of their feed for maintenance and the largest amount possible for growth, which means economy in their raising.

Feed for Breeding Pigs Is of Much Importance

Pigs which are to be used for breeding should be fed with great care. The self-feeder system is fine for pigs being fattened for market, but it may be dangerous to follow when the object is to grow vigorous strong-boned breeding stock. Pigs being grown for breeding purposes should not be allowed to become too fat. For growth and development of strong bone, pigs must have plenty of protein which can be furnished by tankage and dairy by-products such as skim milk, or buttermilk. Keep the pigs on pasture and don't feed too much corn.

NEW SWINE RATION SAVES MUCH MONEY

"Swine suffer much more frequently from unbalanced, inefficient rations than do any other class of live stock," says F. B. Morrison, nationally known authority on animal nutrition at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

He accounts for this in the fact that hogs are fed largely on grain which is poor both in protein and mineral matter, and that they eat relatively little roughage, except when on pasture. He says that the so-called "standard ration" for growing pigs, composed of corn and tankage is inadequate for developing thrifty fall litters—skim milk or other dairy by-products are available at weaning time.

Morrison, with J. M. Fargo of the university swine department, has developed a ration, which has given surprising results in making fall pigs grow as well as spring pigs. "This ration," Morrison says, "is simply a combination of corn, tankage, chopped alfalfa hay, and last—but not least—linseed meal. This combination has been tested on hundreds of pigs, and we are certain of the results," he declares.

"The experiments brought out that pigs fed on the corn and tankage ration gained slightly less than a pound a day, while those fed the efficient combination, given above, gained 1.15 pounds, on the average. This difference meant that the pigs fed this new ration reached the market weight of 200 pounds 29 days before those fed on the ration of corn and tankage alone—thereby saving about a month's labor in feeding and caring for the pigs."

"Still more important was the saving in feed," he went on. "The pigs given only corn and tankage required 417.9 pounds of corn and 47.4 pounds of tankage for each 100 pounds gain—while those fed the efficient combination, needed only 378 pounds of corn, 31.4 pounds of tankage, 19.6 pounds of chopped alfalfa hay, and 19.6 pounds of linseed meal to make the same gain—a saving of 16.7 pounds of feed in putting on each 100 pounds of pork."

Up-to-Date Information on Planting Soy Beans

Bulletin 310 of the Illinois station at Urbana contains the best up-to-date information on soy beans. It tells all about planting soy beans, the varieties to use, and how to harvest. A map of Illinois is printed in the bulletin indicating that soy beans are most extensively grown in eastern and southern Illinois. For the state as a whole the acreage is only over 700,000. In other words soy beans are grown as extensively in Illinois as wheat is grown in Iowa. Because of the fact that soy beans are so popular in Illinois the Illinois bulletin should be especially worth while.

Soy beans in the silage increase its protein content by about one-half of 1 per cent.

Crop rotation systems, manuring, fertilizing, are some of the ways that the natural fertility of the soil may be restored.

Bull Is Most Important Animal In a Dairy Herd

The most important animal in a dairy herd is the bull. As he is the sire of all the calves, he alone is responsible for half of the individuality and milking ability of the future dairy herd. The cow is important, but she can exert her influence on only one calf each year.

This important animal at the head of a dairy herd should by all means be a purebred. It is not so much the registration papers that make the superior individual, but with the registration papers the owner knows exactly what breeding and performance records are behind his herd sire.

A good purebred bull is one with high production among his ancestors. The dam of the bull and the dam of the bull's sire should both have records which are far above the average of the cows to which the bull will be mated.

Alfalfa pays both the farmer and the land, and the stock like it.

Sour skim milk is probably the best single feed for starting off young chicks. It should be used in connection with ordinary commercial chick feeds and the home-mixed dry mash.

ROY ANDERSON

Roy Anderson, the Well Driller, is located at 319 Colburn Ave. in Joliet and when in need of work of this kind you should call Joliet 4146.

Every farmer and stock raiser knows what it means to him and his farm to have a constant flow of pure water on it. Sometimes such a running well comes without assistance, but in most cases it is necessary to drill considerably for them. In this respect, let us introduce Roy Anderson in Joliet.

It makes no matter what problems you may have along these lines, you can depend upon the advice and information of this expert. In the early days we formed pools or basins in which to collect water screened through the sand and gravel. Then with the aid of bucket and rope we would bring it to the surface for drinking and cooking. In time we discovered that such wells also drained matter from the top soil and germs soon filled our well, so instead of drinking health we were soon drinking disease.

Today I am sure no one would think of drinking out of an open well or basin unless it was fresh spring water with a constant flow. With a modern well drilled to distant depths we get below the water line and in time the water strains through several layers of sand and gravel, giving us at the top of the well a healthy almost scientifically pure water.

Possibly you can have a running well on your property. At least you can employ Roy Anderson to start drilling for same. Sometimes it is obtained at a reasonable depth, but in most cases it takes a deep well to produce a good flow of water.

In many well drained sections people are fortunate to be able to pump with power pumps at great depths any water at all. So we should be grateful to find water so near the surface.

As a nation we must depend upon adequate water supply, so must we depend upon master well drillers to supply the convenience. We consider their profession most worthy in this Farmers' and Business Men's Review.

Joliet Auto Brake Service

Guaranteed Satisfaction

The Joliet Auto Brake Service is located at 305 North Joliet Street in Joliet. They maintain a service that is unexcelled by any establishment in their line. Phone 4694.

The Joliet Auto Brake Service wonders just how many motorists realize how many qualifications their brake-lining must have to give 100 per cent. service. It must resist water, heat, oil, dirt and wear. It must not harden and glaze or soften and swell, it must be cut to an exact length, properly fitted to the bands, the rivets must be countersunk the proper amount, and last and perhaps the most important element is proper adjustment.

Any garage man will tell any motorist that he can properly adjust the brakes on any car. To prove that this is absurd one has but to consider that some of the best automotive engineers in the world have adopted hydraulic brakes for the sole reason that the exact pressure the brake was designed to exert is applied to each wheel.

It is reasonable to believe that specialists who are trained to and do nothing else can and will give better service than the man who

GOOD BUILDING TODAY NOT ONLY FOR WEALTHY

Good building was once thought of as something difficult to produce and too costly for any but the envied rich to have. Yet today notice the little cottages and bungalows that are being erected everywhere, constructed of nationally approved building materials and possessing a charm that makes the "castle" of a decade or two ago look like last year's Christmas trees.

FEEDING CORN SILAGE TO FARM ANIMALS

(By H. H. Kildee)

The silo has, for a long time, been proving its value to the live stock farmer. It should form a part of the permanent improvements of every live stock farm. Experienced feeders from all parts of the country testify to the good qualities of silage.

Information concerning the use of this feed is being sought from every available source. In answer to the many questions that are being daily received at the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station, this bulletin has been prepared. Corn silage only is discussed herein because it is the staple silage of Iowa.

Fattening Cattle.

Corn silage should be put into the feeding program of every Iowa beef producer if he wants to fatten cattle economically and efficiently. That corn silage is our most profitable cattle roughage has been clearly demonstrated at the Experiment Station as well as upon hundreds of Iowa farms.

The addition of corn silage to the ration not only decreases very materially the cost of gains, but usually makes them more rapidly. The steers are finished more quickly and ordinarily sell for a higher price than where clover is used as the roughage.

Fattening cattle of all ages utilizes as their roughage ration. It is as good for the calf and yearling as for the two and three year old. All profit from its use.

That the corn grain which is put into the silo is not wasted our feeding records clearly show. Cattle receiving silage do not eat as much grain as hay fed cattle, the decrease being approximately equal to the amount of corn found in the silage.

Silage For Dairy Cattle.

The value of silage was first realized by dairy farmers for nowhere is the silo so much a necessity as upon the dairy farm. And no dairy farm is complete in its equipment that does not have at least one silo for winter feeding and one with a smaller diameter for summer feeding.

The characteristics of good corn silage make it preeminently a feed for dairy cattle. It is palatable, succulent, bulky, beneficial to the digestive tract, and economical. These are among the leading characteristics of the ration which is essential to the largest and most economical flow of milk. In fact, most dairy farmers in the corn belt realize that to secure the largest possible profits from a herd of cows they must feed corn silage. In regions where corn cannot be grown successfully for silage, many dairy men have silos in which they cure other crops.

Experiments carried on at the different experiment stations show conclusively that silage is far superior to shock corn or hay or hay in milk production. Silage fed cows produced from eleven to thirteen per cent. more milk than cows fed fodder from the same acreage.

Effects of Silage on Milk.

Contrary to the opinion formerly held the milk from silage fed cows is not inferior in flavor or odor to the milk from cows fed dry feed. The condensed milk companies which formerly did not favor milk from silage fed cows, are now advising their patrons to put up silos.

Great care should be taken, however, to prevent the odor of silage from contaminating the freshly drawn milk which takes up odors very quickly. It is best to feed the silage after milking and just what will be eaten up clean at that feed. The silos should be shut off from the barn proper. The idea still held by some, that corn silage will destroy the teeth and digestive tract of the cow and induce such disease as tuberculosis, is erroneous.

Develop Heifer's Stomach

There is perhaps nothing more important than to encourage calves to eat hay as soon as possible. A heifer calf intended to be raised for the dairy needs to have its stomach developed as much as possible so that it may become able to consume a maximum amount of feed at maturity. Let us never lose sight of this fact, even while we are feeding the calf, that the dairy cow is a machine for converting feed into milk and butterfat.

Joliet Buick Co.

Buick Sales and Service

The Joliet Buick Company which is located at 125 Cass Street in Joliet is the Home of Good Used Cars. A number of exceptional values will be found here. Phone 3701.

A few years ago there was no such thing as a used car dealer. Today, there are almost as many dealing in used cars as in new. The reason for this is quite simple. The first depreciation on a car is the greatest. As soon as a car leaves the dealer's hands it is a used car and the buyer takes his loss. This car isn't hurt in any way, in fact many of them are better than when first run out of the factory.

Each year hundreds and thousands of people put these cars on the market and we are thus enabled to buy a much better car than we could possibly buy new. When in the market for such a car, you will find no better place to make your selection than at the Joliet Buick Company in Joliet.

This firm has a corps of the most expert automobile mechanics available. They go over every inch of every car that comes into their place of business. Every bearing is tightened, all worn parts replaced by new, in fact the car is completely restored. Here you buy a car that for all practical purposes is as good as new but at much less than a new car.

The sales are made here on a strict business basis. You may have terms if you wish and the same guarantee that goes with a new car.

The manager of this firm is thoroughly reliable in every way and determined to meet the demand for these cars. If you have such a car that you wish to sell you will find this firm the best possible market.

It makes no difference if you are looking for a family car or small car to use in business so that the family may use the one you now have, you will find your needs satisfactorily taken care of at the Joliet Buick Company in Joliet.

In any case the service is rendered most gladly and courteously and in this Farmers' and Business Men's Review we heartily recommend this reliable firm when in the market for a used car.

Good Bread From Illinois Soft-Wheat Flours

(By Ruth A. Wardall and Natalie K. Fitch)

Fully half the wheat grown in Illinois is classed as soft. This fact suggests the desirability of a good understanding of the use of flour made from such wheat, in order that this important Illinois product may be more fully utilized within the state. A more extensive use of soft-wheat flour in making of bread would be an advantage to Illinois and probably to the country as a whole.

In general practice the soft-wheat flours have long been used for pastry and quick breads, but their bread-making qualities have not been so clearly recognized. A study of the baking qualities of Illinois soft-wheat flours by the Department of Home Economics of the University of Illinois has demonstrated that superior bread can be made from them. Many loaves have been secured showing excellent appearance, texture, and flavor. Since satisfactory results have been obtained from the Illinois soft-wheat flour, it seems desirable to bring their value to general attention.

The making of bread in the home is still quite a common practice altho the commercial baker has to a great extent supplanted the home baker. The increasing demand for commercially baked bread is resulting in a product of high quality and improvements are constantly being made in appearance, flavor, and nutritive value. There are times and circumstances, however, when it seems desirable or necessary to the housewife to make bread. When the bread is made at home, it is possible to control the ingredients and the conditions under which it is made. There are certain characteristics of a good loaf of homemade bread which make a universal appeal and the satisfaction in the product will often lead to some baking. There seems to be a place for both the commercial and the homemade bread, and convenience, time, and individual preference will determine the procedure for any given household.

Nobody has more poor relations than a scrub bull.

Many a good dairy herd has been set back materially in only one generation by a poor bull.

Bovine tuberculosis is especially dangerous for babies. Hence all cattle supplying milk or milk products to the public should be free from tuberculosis.

Substitutes for Milk

Keeping cows has never been considered a recreation. They have been kept because the experience of mankind showed his dependence upon them and their product. A person can get along with substitutes for milk and butter for some time but after a while a craving for the real product of the cow develops. People who at first note no difference between butter and butter substitutes, after a number of months often come almost to loathe the sight of a substitute.

CARE OF THE DAIRY CALF

(By J. B. Shepherd, Associate Dairy Husbandman, Bureau of Dairy Industry)

The dairy calf must have good feed and care in order to grow and to develop properly. A calf that gets a good start during the first six months has a better chance of developing into a large-size animal capable of giving a good account of itself when mature than one getting a poor start during this time.

Care of the Newborn Calf.

The calf should be born in a clean, disinfected, well-bedded box stall. Immediately after arrival it must be given attention. Sometimes a slimy membrane covers its nose. Remove this so that it can breathe more easily. Usually the cow will start to dry the calf at once by licking it vigorously. If she does not do this, dry it with burlap, straw, or some other suitable material. Shortly after birth the calf is able to stand and within a half hour it will be nursing. Sometimes the calf is so weak that it is necessary to hold it to the cow's udder in order that it may nurse. Give the calf the first milk, known as colostrum, which is very beneficial in cleaning out its system and in aiding the organs to start functioning properly. To guard against infection apply tincture of iodine to the calf's naval soon after birth.

Leave the calf with its mother 24 to 48 hours if she is progressing normally. This will enable it to get small quantities of its mother's milk at the proper temperature as often as it is needed. When this period has elapsed remove the calf, because a calf which has been left with its mother too long is harder to teach to drink than one removed soon after birth.

Teaching the Calf to Drink.

A calf that has been kept without feed at least 12 hours can usually be taught to drink quite readily. Give it fresh, warm milk from its mother and feed this from a clean pail. Back the calf into a corner, straddle it, and place the pail of milk in front of it. Dip two fingers into the milk and place them in the calf's mouth. When it starts to suck the fingers, draw its nose down into the bucket of milk. Spread the two fingers apart a little way so that the milk will be drawn up into its mouth between the fingers as the calf sucks. After it gets several swallows of milk remove the fingers slowly. Repeat this operation as often as necessary. Many calves taught by this method will drink at the first feeding.

Cleanliness the First Essential.

Cleanliness is absolutely essential in the successful raising of calves. This is equally true of the feed, pen, bedding, and pails or utensils. All milk and other feeds should be fresh and clean. Keep the calf pens clean and well bedded with dry material. Thoroughly wash and scald or sterilize milk pails after each feeding. Remove discarded feed from the feed boxes each day. Attention to these details is the best preventive of disease. Many small disturbances of the calf's stomach and digestive system which hinder growth and development are caused by bacteria due to unclean conditions.

When separated milk from a creamery is fed it should always be Pasteurized, because it is practically impossible to know that such milk is free from organisms that cause disease.

Changing and Increasing the Feed.

A few calves are raised on whole milk, but it is usually too valuable to feed. Calves do nearly as well on skim milk, and most calves are raised on this feed. If fresh skim milk is not available, dried or powdered skim milk may be fed instead, or the calf may be raised on calf-meal gruels. Feed hay and grain at an early age to supplement these feeds.

Feeding Hay, Grain and Silage.

At the beginning of the third week the calf should be provided with small amounts of both hay and grain. Feed the most palatable hay on hand. Clean, bright, clover, alfalfa, or mixed hay is best. Do not feed a very young calf alfalfa hay that is too leafy as this is apt to cause scours. Feed hay sparingly at first and increase the amount gradually as the calf gets accustomed to it. Place a rack where the calf can reach the hay but can not soil it. Put only as much hay in this rack as the calf will clean up in one day.

Raising the Calf on Calf-Meal Gruels.

If skim milk is scarce, whole milk may be gradually replaced by calf-meal gruels. Although this method of feeding is not quite so satisfactory as the feeding of skim milk, fairly good results will be obtained if a good calf meal is selected and properly fed.

There are several ready-mixed calf meals on the market. Satisfactory calf meals may also be mixed at home, provided the necessary ingredients can be obtained.

MOTHER'S EXERCISE

I wondered how my Mother got Her proper exercise.

She doesn't golf or go to gym Or play a game with any vim. And so I asked her why, one day. She looked at me so wise And showed me from the kitchen door,

Where, flapping in the air, The baby's clothes hung on the line. I soon had counted 'way past nine. She laughed like everything and said, "My Daily Dozen's there!"
